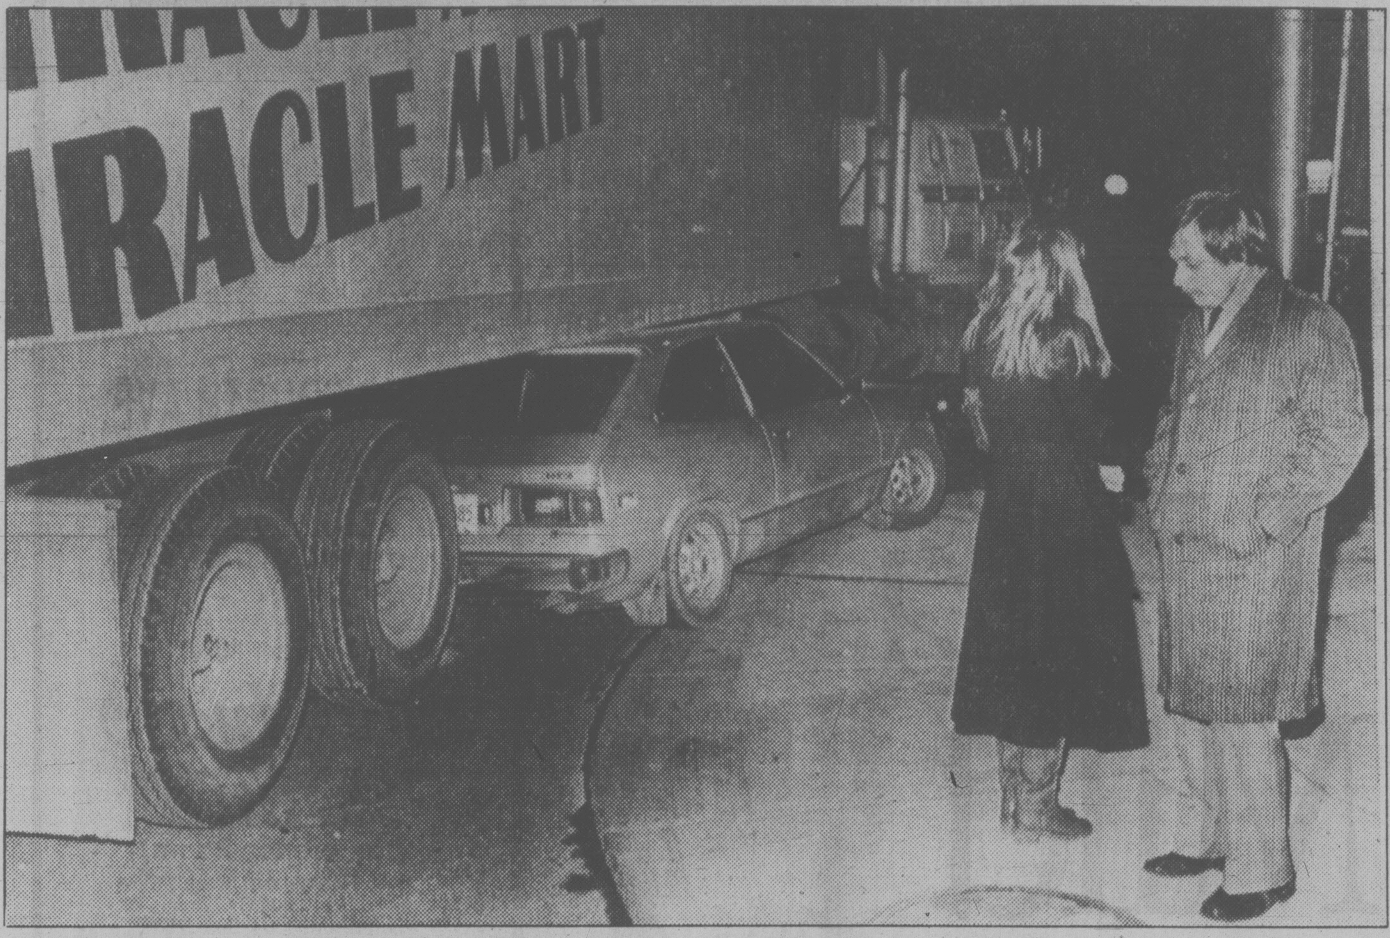
Accord on hospital funding



SEMI-DETACHED, a motorist looks on in seeming disbelief after a transport truck drove over his small car in Ottawa Wednesday. Both vehicles were apparently turning the corner when the mishap occurred. No one was injured.

B.C. agrees to reverse current budget method

VANCOUVER (CP) — After years of wrangling over health costs, the provincial government and British Columbia hospitals have come out in support of a report on hospital funding.

Released Wednesday, the $225,000 study recommends a reversal of the present budget method. Instead of final funding decisions taking place after the services have been delivered, they would be made beforehand with the details spelled out in a formal contract between each hospital and the government.

The consultants who prepared the report say the changes will reduce antagonism between hospitals and the health ministry, provide positive incentives for hospitals to cut costs and reduce the uncertainty for hospital and ministry planners.

The study was set up in 1978 as a joint project of the B.C. Health Association, the major spokesman for the province's hospitals, and the ministry.

While the study was in progress former health minister Bob McClelland followed a year of unevenly-applied fiscal restraint with a five-per-cent ceiling on increases in 1979-80 hospital budgets.

Hospitals responded by curtailing programs and letting the public know through the press about outdated facilities. Eventually, McClelland increased funding by $82 million.

Annual operating costs of hospitals this year will be about $700 million out of a total health budget of $1.2 billion. Budget requests are prepared at the beginning of the year, but not approved until expenditures are under way, and substantial year-end adjustments are often required.

The report says deficiencies in the present system include:

Hospitals do not know when the ministry will complete a phase of the funding cycle or how the budgets are determined.

There is little recognition of fixed and variable costs.

Differences in the sophistication of services rendered by different hospitals are not always recognized.

Hospitals may overestimate costs and will spend their entire budget whether necessary or not.

Planning and budgeting are carried on separately and there is not enough monitoring of hospital efficiency.

To overcome the problems, the study report recommends that the province develop an over-all health plan and specify what each hospital should be doing. The five-year plan would serve as a budgeting framework.

Individual hospital contracts would spell out fixed costs and the methods of determining variable costs such as the amount of x-ray film used, or the number of complete blood counts.

Hospitals that come in under budget would be allowed to keep a "reasonable portion" of the underrun, the report says.

Gold at $801 . . . 'It's nuts'

NEW YORK (AP) — Gold prices soared past $800 a troy ounce for the first time today as buyers paid up to $803 U.S. — $932.60 Canadian — on the New York Commodity Exchange. The new mark came just two days after the metal first passed $700.

"It's absolutely nuts," said a trader at Republic National Bank in New York after gold hit $803 before slipping to $801.

The surge came after prices had fallen in early trading as many traders took profits. The New York price had dropped as low as $715, down from $744 Wednesday before the latest surge began.

In London, gold closed at $760, a record close for that market — up from $752.50 Wednesday. It had fallen to $730.50 in mid-morning trading.

Carter opts for Tier plan

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — U.S. President Carter has decided he prefers the proposed 2,400-kilometre Northern Tier pipeline to carry Alaska crude oil to northern states, according to the Minneapolis Star.

The newspaper says the decision is based on advance word received from the office of Vice-President Walter Mondale. In Washington, the White House said an announcement would be made later today.

Carter chose the Northern Tier proposal over a competing plan by Trans Mountain Pipe Line Ltd., which wants to build a 823-mile line from near Vancouver to Edmonton, where it would connect with a line that now supplies the northern states with Canadian crude oil.

The Northern Tier line would run from Port Angeles, Wash., to Clearbrook, Minn.

The president's decision is expected to provide a major boost to Northern Tier Pipeline Co.'s efforts to obtain financing for the $1.23-billion (U.S.) project.

He said Carter's decision was based largely on four factors:

—The system can move oil to refineries in northern states from a larger number of sources.

—It can deliver more crude because it has the greatest capacity of the various proposals.

—Its location, entirely in the U.S., will provide more job opportunities for U.S. workers and more tax base for state and local governments.

—An all U.S. route is better for national security reasons and will not face the delays of obtaining Canadian permits.

Civic beat

Starting today on the Times local page, reporter Norman Gidney takes his first look at what's happening in the Greater Victoria area in a new column called Civic Affairs.

Every Thursday, he'll offer comment and analysis and review what local politicians are doing, thinking.

Gidney knows the civic scene. A former Canadian Press and legislative reporter, he joined the Times as an editorial writer and now covers city hall in Victoria.

USC total a record

There's a smile on the face of Dr. Lotta Hitschmanova today.

And there's a good reason — thousands of generous Greater Victoria residents contributed almost $33,000 to the Unitarian Service Committee's annual fund drive in this area, a record.

The final list of donors appeared in Tuesday's Times to wrap up the local drive.

If you meant to donate but missed out, you can still send your cheque to USC Canada, 56 Sparks St., Ottawa, Ont. K1P 5B1.

USC officials in Ottawa say they're delighted with the help.

From them, through us, to you, heartfelt thanks.

Hospitals split on abortions

Victoria's two major hospitals are now taking distinctly different approaches to abortions.

Victoria General has stopped abortions and its board is planning to meet with its therapeutic abortion committee to discuss committee policy.

In past, virtually all abortion applications would have been approved.

But so far this year, only four of 31 applications for abortions have been approved by the committee.

The Royal Jubilee Hospital abortion committee has begun meeting weekly to consider applications and its approach has been to approve all applications.

In the past, each hospital board has approved the members of the other hospital's abortion committee.

In this way, the comittees met on alternate months, with the VGH committee handling all the applications for both hospitals one month and the RJH committee handling the load the next month.

Vic General handled most of the region's abortions, doing 725 abortions last year compared to 1,362 live births.

At RJH, there were 550 abortions compared to 1,434 live births in the year ending March 30, 1979.

However a change in the membership of the Vic General abortion committee brought about, in the words of committee chairman Dr. Jack Cooper, "a trend to consider applications a lot more intently."

But when the VGH committee recently approved only two of 15 applications, the RJH committee held a special meeting and approved all those which had been rejected.

VGH medical director Dr. John Carlow said the changed stance of the abortion committee reflects a changing mood among the hospital's medical staff, which is concerned about the number of abortions being done at the hospital.

Cooper said the committee is simply following the Criminal Code, under which abortions are allowed if the mother's health is endangered, as well as the United Nations definition that health is not only an absence of disease, but a positive state of well-being.

"The majority of members have decided that usually there is not adequate evidence in the applications of the health risks involved. They are looking for evidence of real health hazards, information which is to be supplied by the doctors of the applicants."

Meanwhile, Yvette Perreault, spokesman for the Coalition of B.C. Rape Crisis Centres said Wednesday that Health Minister Rafe Mair should be replaced with a minister who is not biased against abortion and who will uphold federal laws allowing abortion.

Kabul kicks out newsmen

Times News Services

Afghanistan's pro-Soviet government today ordered the expulsion of all American journalists, accusing them of biased reporting and interference in Afghan internal affairs, a Western diplomat said in New Delhi.

"The U.S. correspondents were detained by Afghan authorities at the Kabul Intercontinental Hotel and told this morning to leave on the first available flight," said the source, who declined to be identified.

The U.S. Embassy in the Indian capital said the American Embassy in Kabul was informed of the expulsion order. Initial reports said only American citizens were to be deported, the source said. It was not clear if this included non-Americans working for U.S. organizations.

The Afghan order came three days after Ayatollah Khomeini's regime in neighboring Iran ordered all American journalists out of that country.

Diplomats in New Delhi estimated 50 to 60 Americans are in the Afghan capital. Much of their news reports and film have been hand-carried to other countries since communications have not worked normally since the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan on Christmas Day.

U.S. State Department spokesman Mark Sawoski said the expulsion order was "a flagrant violation of basic norms of international behavior. We find it reprehensible."

Cabinet may order BCR back

Speculation is mounting that the government may force a return to work as marathon negotiations aimed at settling the month-old B.C. Railway strike continued today.

The two sides have bargained at the legislature for more than 24 hours with no sign of a break.

Labor Minister Jack Heinrich has consistently opposed the use of essential services legislation to end the strike although the government is under heavy pressure from northern communities.

Heinrich said the BCR situation was discussed in cabinet early today but said he was not taking any special message from cabinet back to the negotiators.

While cabinet may be considering a back-to-work order, it faces the strong possibility that the unions will not obey.

Coroners unpaid since November

Fee-for-service coroners haven't been paid since early November because the provincial government seriously under-budgeted the coroner's service in the current fiscal year.

B.C.'s chief coroner Dr. William McCarthur confirmed the delays in payments and revealed that some funeral homes and hospitals in the province have refused to conduct business for the coroner's office until they get paid.

However, McCarthur said none of the 140 fee-for-service coroners in the province have refused to hold inquests because of the pay delays, despite press reports to the contrary.

McCarthur said he told the government last June that the $1.05 million budget for the coroner's service for 1979-80 was inadequate and that between $500,000 to $1 million more would be needed.

He said that a review of past coroner's budgets indicated that the average expenditure — in 1979 dollars — was $1.5 million.

However, McCarthur said, nothing apparently was done and the money simply ran out in November.

He said he understands a special warrant for $750,000 has now been drawn up and approved by cabinet.

McCarthur said cheques are being processed today and all the coroners should receive their back payments by next week.

On another matter, McCarthur said there is no truth to reports that coroners were resigning to protest compulsory attendance at a three-day training seminar in Vancouver the end of the month.

He said he hasn't received any resignations but added "I can't say I'm not going to get one."

On Wednesday Chilliwack coroner Dr. Doug Colledge said he had resigned in December rather than attend the three-day session because it would cost him about $1,500 in lost revenue as a general practitioner.

Colledge said he wrote to McArthur's office saying it would not be economically feasible for him to attend the seminar. McCarthur wrote back and asked for his resignation.

McCarthur said that when he took over as chief coroner last March the largest single complaint he heard was the lack of training for coroners.

He said that under the Coroner's Act he has the authority to conduct seminars and programs for coroners and was using that right in organizing the up-coming seminar, the first ever.

"The opposition is understandable," he said. "People have been operating totally independently for years and years. They are resistant to any sort of central organization."

MDs pitch for higher fees

VANCOUVER (CP)—The British Columbia Medical Association is launching a $380,000 advertising campaign to generate public support for increased funding for health care — including higher physician fees.

The campaign, with a theme of Help Us Help You, will also include an appeal for people to look after their health better.

A spokesman for the BCMA, which represents 4,600 doctors in medicare fee negotiations, said one of the basic messages of the campaign is a warning that unless more money flows into the health care system, there will be trouble.

"Nurses are unhappy, the hospital employees union is unhappy and doctors are unhappy," the spokesman said.

But he denied that the aim is to prepare people for some form of direct billing by doctors.

"The program is so doctors won't have to opt out of medicare."

Most members of the BCMA will pay a $100 special assessment to cover the costs of the advertising campaign.

The campaign, which will include radio and TV comercials, newspaper advertisements and posters and handouts in doctors' offices, is scheduled to begin May 15 and run for eight months.

The campaign will climax as doctors, now in a two-year contract with the province, go into their next round of negotiations.

Two approaches to abortions ewake of statements by Mair that too many abortions are being peformed in B.C. and that sex education should be increased.

"We are shocked that Premier Bill Bennett has appointed a health minister who is clearly more concerned with statistics than with the physical and emotional health of women and children in B.C.," Perreault said.

She said abortion is the only birth control method available to women who get pregnant after being raped.

"Contrary to Mr. Mair's beliefs, women can and do become pregnant against their wishes," she said. "Sex education is not adequately taught to young people and birth control is not safe or 100 per cent effective."

If Mair is successful in making abortions harder to get, B.C. women will seek abortions elsewhere, Perreault said.

Developer Hans Hartwig's project on Wharf Street has been sold for $1.8 million to a group of Victoria businessman headed by realtor Cedric Steele.

Hartwig Court was a collection of century-old brick and stone warehouses and stores which Hartwig renovated as commercial and office space in 1975.

It contains 30,000 square feet, of which 40 per cent is rented by the provincial government.

Steele, who owns Cedric Steele Realty Ltd., is also president of the Victoria Chamber of Commerce. He wouldn't identify the other partners in the purchase.

Bombs send U.K. tourists into streets

LONDON (UPI) — Two bombs rocked a tourist hotel near London's famed Oxford Street today, sending hundreds of panicked guests into the streets and killing an Arab police believe was making explosives in his room.

The first explosion occurred at 7:30 a.m. (11:30 p.m. Wednesday PST) when most of the guests of the popular Mount Royal Hotel were still in bed. A hotel guest suffered cuts and bruises and six hotel rooms also were severely damaged.

The second blast came just minutes before noon and no injuries were immediately reported but hundreds of panicked hotel guests and shoppers at nearby stores fled into the street.

Police said the second bomb evidently was buried in the debris of the first blast.

A Scotland Yard spokesman said the dead man was about 35 and of "Arab origin" and apparently had been "handling" explosives when the bomb went off in his room. His identity was not immediately known. The spokesman said the name on the hotel register "is not necessarily who he is" and the name was not released.

Although no group immediately claimed any link with the bomb, the man's Arab background made it unlikely the Irish Republican Army was involved.

Last month, in London's most recent bombing, a small explosive was thrown at a window of the Turkish Airlines office, also near Oxford Street. An Armenian group claimed responsibility for that bombing.

Way clear for open Sundays

VANCOUVER (CP) — In a decision that could mean wide open Sunday shopping for any business in Vancouver, B.C. Supreme Court ruled Wednesday the City of Vancouver had no right to compel some stores to close Sundays while allowing others to remain open.

Mr. Justice J.G. Gould quashed a city council resolution suspending the business licence of Shelmar Furniture Ltd., owners of Harry Hammer's Warehouse operation, for gross misconduct in violating provisions of the Lord's Day Act by opening Sundays.

The judge criticized the city's patchwork enforcement of the act, that is, allowing businesses such as corner stores and drug stores to remain open but insisting larger businesses stay closed.

In Victoria today, Attorney-General Allan Williams said the court decision will not affect the B.C. government's intention to bring in legislation dealing with Sunday openings at the spring session of the Legislature.

"It won't affect the direction we're taking," Williams said.

In his judgment, Mr. Justice Gould noted the city had decided not to enforce provisions of the act in certain areas of the city and said the purported suspension of the applicant's licence was merely one piece in a complex and selective pattern of Sunday store hour regulation.

"The city is without jurisdiction in that field," he said.

"The (city's) argument that the petitioner was committing an act of gross misconduct by violating the provisions of the Lord's Day Act and thereby gaining an unfair competitive advantage does not bear up under scrutiny.

"Had the city attempted to close down any and all violators of the Lord's Day Act, its corporate apparent indignation at the lawless conduct of the applicant might have been more convincing."

Gould also noted the attorney-general had refused to grant leave to the city to prosecute violators of the act.

The city decided not to enforce provisions of the act against corner stores, drug stores, book stores and some other types of business. But others were to be notified that unless they remained closed, permission to prosecute would be sought from the attorney-general and they would have to appear before council and show cause why the business licence should not be suspended.

Bernie Cobin, better known as Harry Hammer, was delighted with the decision.

Dirty tricks probe going to A-G soon

The results of the RCMP investigation of the so-called political dirty tricks affair should be in the hands of Attorney-General Allan Williams in a few days.

Alan Filmer, the regional Crown counsel who has been advising police on legal aspects of the investigation, said the RCMP file now is with a lawyer in private practice for analysis and an opinion on whether charges should be laid.

The investigation, which has involved several police departments, was originally expected to be concluded by Dec. 15 but was delayed as more information on the writing by Social Credit campaign workers of phoney letters to newspapers kept coming in.

The workers were counselled by caucus researchers to use fictitious names in signing the letters. The advice was given at campaign seminars and on tape recordings distributed to workers.

Meanwhile, two Vancouver lawyers will recommend whether charges should be laid against Social Credit campaign committee members who failed to declare $246,000 of expenses made during the May 10 provincial election campaign, Williams said Wednesday.

Williams said the provincial secretary's ministry has retained L.C. Dudley, one of his former partners, for his expertise in election law, and Tony Pantages, because of the quasi-criminal nature of the matter.

"I'm sure they selected Mr. Pantages because of his experience as a criminal lawyer. He is also the national criminal committee chairman for the Canadian Bar Association," Williams said.

Dan Campbell, Social Credit campaign manager and Premier Bill Bennett's director of intergovernmental affairs, resigned after filing an amendment to the party's return under the Provincial Elections Act detailing the $65,000 he spent and a further $181,000 in unreported expenses attributed to late bills.

The party had previously said it spent $1.3 million on the campaign.

Williams said his ministry will make the final decision on whether to lay charges.

Neil McDiarmid, associate deputy attorney-general "has the responsibility in this area and I am sure he will take into account whatever opinion those two lawyers have provided," he said.

"But he will also make his own decision based upon his examination of the matter."

McDiarmid was the subject of controversy recently when he overruled RCMP and crown counsel recommendations to charge Bill Ritchie, the Central Fraser Valley MLA, with influence peddling.

Tapes tell different rescue tale?

VANCOUVER (CP) — A spokesman for the Canadian Coast Guard said Wednesday that tape recordings of communications concerning the air-sea rescue of the freighter Lee Wang Zin tell a different story in some respects from the one told to an inquest by the ship's pilot.

Stephen Ryback said coast guard investigators are preparing to counter accusations by Capt. Bob Fisher when the inquest resumes Feb. 11.

"I think you'll find that Fisher is wrong on a lot of recall," Ryback said, adding that details of the tapes will not be released before coast guard investigators complete their reports.

Fisher was the last man to leave the freighter before it left for Japan on Christmas Day. Later the same day, the Panamanian-registered vessel capsized off the northern tip of the Queen Charlotte Island with the loss of 30 crew members.

Fisher told the inquest earlier this week that three hours after the ship's S O S was received, the coast guard was still trying to pinpoint the ship's location, although he (Fisher) had phoned the coast guard two hours earlier to suggest where searchers might start looking.

Fisher said coast guard bungling turned the rescue into a salvage operation.

Ryback said there are taped conversations between coast guard stations and the rescue coordination centre at Victoria throughout the incident.

Fisher said in a telephone interview from Nanaimo that he is not concerned what the tapes might contain.

"If they are trying to discredit me, I could care less."

Tidal fishing checked

Tidal water sport fishermen in B.C. are being asked to fill out reports of their angling activities for the federal department of fisheries, department official Bill Masse said Wednesday.

Questionnaires are being sent to 10,000 households throughout B.C. so the department can determine how much tidal sport fishing takes place in the province and develop programs of maintaining the fish resource, Masse said.

Tidal fishermen who indicate on the questionnaire that they are willing to keep a sport fishing diary will get a diary mailed to them.

Tidal sports fishing includes all saltwater fishing such as shore, pier, boat and spear fishing, as well as collecting or trapping shellfish.

PVI strike over

VANCOUVER (CP — A strike that shut down Pacific Vocational Institute ended Wednesday after an 18-hour bargaining session produced a new collective agreement between the school and 200 instructors represented by the B.C. Government Employees Union.

The instructors walked off the job early last week after the union claimed the administration had reneged on its original contract agreement. About 2,000 students missed classes because of the walkout.

Details of the settlement were not disclosed.

Forests gobbled?

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia is losing high quality forest land to other uses at a much faster rate than it is losing farmland, says a University of B.C. professor. Dr. Alan Chambers of the Institute of Animal Resource Ecology said in a paper that some people believe the province's dependence on forestry, considered the major industry, is excessive and dangerous. The most productive forest land is in the greatest demand for other uses such as farms, hydroelectric reservoirs, highways, power lines and townsites.

Careful shopping

Canada's growing addiction to oil should be of concern to Canadians trying to sort out the energy policies of the parties contesting the Feb. 18 federal election.

Imperial Oil Ltd. has calculated that in 1979 there was a five per cent increase in the consumption of petroleum products. That compares to a one per cent decrease in the United States for the same period.

The picture isn't any brighter for the coming year. The company expects that demand in 1980 will grow by the same amount.

Imperial says the country's supplies of home heating oil and most oil products are sufficient to last at least until August. But afterwards, no guarantees. The company says it will stand by that forecast only if foreign oil supplies are not disrupted and no major breakdowns occur in Canadian production and refining systems, both of which are working at capacity.

A combination of higher world oil prices and increased demand will add more pressure to the country's balance of payments deficit. We now import about 25 per cent of our needs — some 300,000 to 400,000 barrels a day. And the cost to the taxpayer, which is reflected in subsidy payments to eastern Canada, is expected to reach nearly $2 billion dollars this year, up from $1.5 billion in 1979.

Despite the increased price of foreign oil, Prime Minister Clark expects a Conservative government to make no alteration to an agreement between Ottawa and Alberta to raise the price of oil by $4 a barrel this year and $4.50 a barrel for the next three years. He also plans to stick with the 18 cent a gallon increase in the federal excise tax.

The Liberal party also says the country must achieve energy self-sufficiency, but has not defined how it would be accomplished, nor has the party bared plans on how to lower the $10 billion a year budget deficit. Pierre Trudeau says a Liberal government would not increase the excise tax. Without being specific, he says only that oil prices must rise.

The New Democratic Party hasn't been any clearer than the Liberals in outlining just how much, if any, gasoline and oil prices should increase.

It should be obvious to Canadians that they are hostage to foreign oil suppliers and their pricing policies. It should be equally obvious that to achieve a greater measure of self-sufficiency and economic stablity, prices must rise.

Voters shopping for a new Canadian energy policy have a choice between going to the check-out counter with the security in knowing there is a price tag on the product or going with only the hope the cashier will charge a fair price.

Improve script

The best that can be suggested for Victoria MP Allan McKinnon's recent remarks about a STOL airport for the city is that he made them in jest.

If he was serious, it's hard not to conclude that he is beginning to succumb to the all-too-regular Tory compulsion for self-annihilation.

Asked about the possibilities for a STOL airport in Victoria, McKinnon said first that he thought it should probably be located in Saanich. Fair enough. There are a number of reasons why Saanich might be a good site, among them the availability of land and a relatively central location for the entire region.

But McKinnon promptly went on to say: "Saanich appears the only place left. They've got farmland there they wouldn't mind having paved over."

The shrieks from farmers, environmentalists, and others who believe in preserving the limited amount of agricultural land we have for the production of foodstuffs might even be heard as far away as Ottawa. Many battles have been fought to prevent Saanich's farmland from being paved over, and you can bet another one would take place if anyone decided to toss an airport among the grazing dairy cows and the fields of berries.

Going from bad to worse, McKinnon then went on to say that in any case, he didn't plan to lose any sleep worrying about a STOL site for Victoria.

That's the sort of remark guaranteed to anger businessmen and professionals who have been working for years to improve transportation between downtown Victoria and Vancouver. Most of them believe a STOL airport would be of considerable help to the regional economy.

McKinnon needs to choose his words more carefully or hire a better joke writer.

BRUCE HUTCHISON

A winter letter from Archie

Archie, who seems to possess no other name, keeps an eye on vacant summer camps (for a modest fee, usually in liquid form). Today we received his mid-winter report, somewhat delayed in the post, as follows:

The New Year came on time, I guess, but I didn't notice it because I was helping Billy Barker and his friends to increase the government's revenue by a dozen bottles of the best. No sacrifice is too hard for us patriots. You might say we were inflated like the rest of the country.

Well, I got home across the lake okay at dawn, in my canoe and that took some careful navigation. Captain Cook or Columbus couldn't have done it better, and them cold sober.

Everything normal

Next day you could tell it was New Year's for sure by all the hangovers in the village. But I inspected your camp and seen that everything was normal. A storm had busted the cable on the wharf. The pump was froze because you forgot to drain it like always. Your old pals, the mink family, have multiplied something wonderful under the cabin. The smell nearly knocked me down but it ought to fade out in another year or two.

I fixed things up, temporary, and you can pay me as soon as possible on account I've just read in the papers about the hard times ahead of us.

The way I get it from the economists there will be a terrible depression or there won't, depending on conditions. Everything will get better if it don't get worse. The living standard will rise if we elect the right government or fall if we elect the wrong one. Economies is easy to understand once you get your mind around the facts and so is politics.

The Liberals nominated Jim Stubbs again, being the only man who would run, and he read a dandy extemporaneous speech written by the brain trust in Ottawa. Jim says he supports the Liberal party but not Trudeau. He'll stand by the party platform if anybody gets around to inventing it.

Anyways, he told us we got to tighten our belts and bite the bullet for a time of austerity due to the government's crazy budget. With my store teeth I can't bite anything harder than spaghetti, well boiled, and the last I seen of Jim he was biting a tenderloin steak at the fancy new restaurant on the highway.

After he explained austerity he lit out for Hawaii to lie on the sand and train himself for the cruel tortures of the election campaign and he took along that pretty Ruth Gropp from the hairdressing parlor as his executive assistant so he could dictate some more speeches to her, maybe. Ruth is practically illiterate but willing and affectionate and looks fine in a bikini, I bet.

The Conservatives re-nominated Gerry Bunkin who always wins. He told the convention he was loyal to his party but disagrees with Clark and Crosbie and the budget. That went over big with the delegates — Gerry knows his politics.

Then I seen Clark on TV and he says he has a image problem but there's plenty of substance behind the image if you can find it. That's my problem, too. You city slickers see only a doddering old guy in overalls but if you could see the substance in Joe and me you'd be surprised. So would Joe and me.

We're all so excited about the winter election, thanks to the Liberals and the NDP, that I reckon nearly half the voters will vote and the other half will complain afterwards that the worst government was elected and the country going to hell in a hack.

The way I see it, the Liberals will win if they can keep Trudeau away on skis in Colorado and the Tories will win if Clark spends the campaign learning to swim in Bermuda.

Both of them, the papers say, will concentrate on bread and butter issues instead of the constitution but most of us haven't tasted butter for years because all the governments keep the price too high to protect the standard of living. Never mind, I bake my own bread, out of real flour, if you can believe it, not the plaster used in the bakeries.

There's no gold rush here and nobody has sold their fillings but that may happen yet and there's sure to be a rush for cordwood when the Arab sheiks raise the oil price to buy more harems and Cadillacs.

Well, I've only got my old age pension to live on but my woodshed is full. It's only us poor folks that can afford to be warm these days. The rich can keep their automobiles. I'll keep my stove. Fair enough.

Your woodpile is safe up to now but you'd better put a burglar alarm on it before the mob arrives from the city with trucks and no respect for private property.

Cure snakebite

So we're full of politics up here but I'd rather be full of something else and you can bring it on your next visit. It's only to cure snake bite of course. The snakes are underground for the winter but you never know when they could come up.

Also, you forgot to feed the mice in the kitchen. I paid two dollars for oatmeal and they're doing fine. You can square that account when you open camp again and the rest of the crowd swoop down us in the spring.

It can't be far behind and, God, how I dread it. So have a happy New Year like they told Marie Antoinette on the steps of the guillotine and don't forget the snakebite cure and vote for somebody next month, anybody. Yours for democracy, austerity and prosperity, Archie.

JAMES STEWART

Two views of past, future

MONTREAL — There is no time for tears, no wailing on the Plains of Abraham, in the thesis for a new Canadian federation published this week by Claude Ryan's Quebec Liberal Party.

"There have been bitter deceptions, tragic misunderstandings," notes the document briefly. "Nevertheless, on the whole, the Canadian experience has created a country which is one of the largest, most attractive and richest in the world."

Compare this to the judgment of Premier Rene Levesque in that other basic document on Canada's future, the white paper on sovereignty-association published in November by the Quebec government:

Driven down

"For generations and against all odds we have maintained an identity that sets us apart in North America," wrote Levesque. "We did this after the defeat, then in the assembly of Lower Canada; we did it despite being crushed in 1837 and under the Act of Union, both of which were aimed at cutting us down to nothing, and again under a federal system which has increasingly driven us into minority status."

This contrast underlines the fundamental conflicts in Quebec society, between the present government and the opposition, between separatists and federalists, between those who have given up on Canadian federalism and those who see it as the best guarantee of prosperity and peaceful coexistence,

Quebecers now have in their hands the two basic texts which reflect these two currents of thought — the government's white paper on sovereignty-association (Quebec-Canada: A New Deal) and the opposition's constitutional treatise (A New Canadian Federation).

These are the guidebooks for those who will be voting in the June referendum on sovereignty-association and in a subsequent Quebec election. The Ryan document, when it becomes official policy of the Quebec Liberals, will be presented to Quebecers as the valid and viable alternative to the PQ's goal of sovereignty-association, or political independence in a continuing common market and monetary union with the rest of Canada.

The basic question to be decided, of course, is whether or not Quebec should remain part of the political unit of Canada. The PQ says no, with the qualification that political separation would be accompanied by the continued economic association with Canada based on a treaty between the two equal partners.

The Liberals of Claude Ryan say yes, Quebec should remain part of one country called Canada, with the qualification that the federal system be modified to "provincialize" many powers of the central government and guarantee to Quebec the capacity to protect and affirm its distinct personality.

The PQ option, involving political separatism, could hardly be acceptable to any central government or to other parts of Canada.

The Liberal option, though its radical shifts in power towards the provinces and particularly towards Quebec will meet vigorous opposition, is readily acceptable as a basis for negotiation because of its resolute commitment to federalism.

. . . throw off shackles

The Ryan document, on the whole, is more original in concept than the PQ document which, in the line of many previous Quebec governments, concentrates almost exclusively on what Quebec wants rather than on what Canada needs.

Ryan himself notes that his party's report on a new Canadian federation is the first such Quebec position conceived in a Canadian context and not jealously or exclusively in a Quebec context.

The two current textbooks — the PQ white paper and the Liberal document — demonstrate this important change in approach by their contrast. Readers of both will get not only two views of the future, but two views of the past.

The PQ view, as described in the white paper, sees the Canadian experience as a shackle, a permanent threat to Quebec's survival, and federalism as such a failure that it could never be renewed to the satisfaction of both Quebec and the rest of Canada. The solution is to put the whole country out of its misery by ending federalism and instituting sovereignty-association.

"The new deal we are offering means, first of all, an end to all those shackles," writes Levesque in the white paper. "An end to those narrow roles to which so many individuals — and our entire people — have been confined. An end to manipulation and exploitation from outside. An end to the insecurity of a minority and an end to begging permission whenever we want to act, whenever we want to communicate."

In his document, Ryan deals with this "resolutely pessimistic view" of the pequistes as a familiar negative attitude which has been adopted by some Quebecers ever since Confederation.

"Ignoring the innumerable accomplishments of the last hundred years, they see everywhere stalemate, retreat, defeat, threat and danger in the Canadian federal experience," says the Liberal report.

Larger vision

But another Quebec viewpoint has always existed, says the report, a larger vision which believes that the best future for Quebec lies in a freely made decision to remain within the Canadian federation.

The Ryan document wastes little time in recriminations about the past. "A realistic and honest evaluation of the Canadian federation can lead to only one conclusion — the assets far outweigh the liabilities."

The Quebec Liberals are inviting Quebecers and other Canadians to undertake the making of a new federation "persuaded from the start that membership in this country is a precious asset ... A good number of things work well in this country. We must have the courage to say so and to preserve them."

It seems an open and generous judgment of the Canadian experience which is apt to be better received by Canadians than the sour judgment in the PQ white paper: "Though federalism is not necessarily synonymous with poverty and political domination, neither is it a guarantee of freedom or a high standard of living."

Nothing new

Your reprint of the Washington Post article under the large banner "Physiognomy comes to the West" (Lifestyles, Jan. 3) announces that some new oriental wisdom has recently been introduced to North America by an unsung professor of philosophy.

Timothy Mar may well have learned the "art of face reading" 50 years ago in China, but this so-called science, which purportedly enables him to foretell the fates of leading American politicians, was actually launched in Europe in 1773. By the 1790s it was the subject of popular ridicule.

The Swiss preacher Johann Kaspar Lavater, noted for his irrationalism, published his first volumes on the subject 1775-78, which appeared in an English translation of 1789 as "Essays on Physiognomy: for the promotion of the Knowledge and Love of Mankind". Its point of departure was the biblical view that God created Man in His image. It should therefore be possible to interpret a man's soul (psyche) by examining his face.

The result of a lifetime of work is a series of curious etchings — but no general scientific principles. Of course, he argues (and perhaps the up-to-date Mr. Mar does so as well), we are all "physiognomical empiracists". Or in less stuffy jargon: we all judge people by their looks. So what else is new? As for Mr. Mar's "innovative" introduction of the topic to the U.S., he's 150 years late for the honor. An early English translation of Lavater's work is in the John Hopkins Medical Library. — Dr. Michael Hadley, Associate Professor, Department of Germanic Languages and Literature. A beginning

The recent report regarding Health Minister Mair's stand on abortion is something one rarely sees in politics — a politician with the courage to have convictions.

Predictably some woman, who no doubt considers herself a spokesperson for women, sees this as making it difficult for poor women to kill their babies. What makes her think that the majority of women are centrally concerned with killing their babies? Poor women are undoubtedly much more concerned with having enough money to be able to live. Abortion does not give them that, but laws which give women workers equality of wages with men would.

When Pierre Trudeau caved in to a group of [illegible] women 10 years ago, and legalized abortion, he dealt a mortal blow to the real womens' movement. According to statistics, the gap between mens' and womens' wages has widened considerably since that time. So-called womens' rights people have been so busy persuading women to trade selfish self-gratification for equality of law and opportunity that real equality has been buried under the shrillness of their rhetoric.

Congratulations to Mr. Mair! The tightening up of abortion practise is at least a beginning for humanity.— Phyllis Malone, 923 Forshaw Road.

Too dogmatic

This letter is written in reference to the Youth Clinic column which appears in your newspaper. In that column several "authorities" reply to questions posed by young readers.

Although I sometimes agree with the answers given in Youth Clinic, I notice that the authors seem to be forgetting that they are expressing mere opinions rather than proven facts.

An example of the increasingly dogmatic tone of the opinions expressed in the column was provided by the recent discussion of "rock music", in which a young man wrote in to say that he was troubled because a certain religious periodical had claimed that rock music was "corrupting." The author of Youth Clinic's answer proceeded to attack that rather conservative tenet on the grounds that it was un-Christian and dictatorial. Moreover, the author claimed that those who express such beliefs are mostly middle-aged! (Do middle-aged people tend to be un-Christian and dictatorial?) Now, I, too, listen to rock music, but it is easy for me to understand how an opinion on rock music could be both critical and Christian. (Fortunately, I'm not yet middle-aged!)

Various other topics (including pre-marital sex, masturbation, etc.) have been discussed from similar narrow-minded and "popular" viewpoints. I fear that young readers are not getting a balanced and thoughtful presentation on these important issues by reading the Youth Clinic column. — Steven M. Lucas, 1020 Greenridge Crescent.

'Yours in the brotherhood of man'

By BERNARD LEVIN
The Times of London

Two women are about to go to prison in South Africa for talking to a third. Since not even in South Africa is talking a crime per se, the statement requires some amplification; some, but alas not much, for by now the iniquities of the "banning" system practised by that beautiful and wicked land are familiar. But its application in the particular case I want to write about today, and the special iniquity of that application will be less well known.

The victim is Winnie Mandela, wife of Nelson Mandela, who is serving a life sentence on Robben Island, where a life sentence means exactly that; there is no system of release or remission. (Mandela was originally sentenced on charges relating to sabotage and the recruitment of persons for guerrilla warfare; this newspaper, in reporting the verdict — and remember that this refers to a trial which took place as long ago as 1964 — referred to men "goaded beyond endurance" and declared editorially that "the verdict of history will be that the ultimate guilty party is the government in power, and that already is the verdict of world opinion.")

Breaking spirits

Mrs. Mandela has been subjected, for the past 16 years, to a campaign of harassment and persecution that is exceptional even by South African standards. (It is not to be supposed, incidentally, that such treatment is no more than random cruelty; the South African authorities are concerned not merely to imprison men like Mandela but to destroy them utterly as human beings, and breaking the spirit of his brave and devoted wife would be a great help towards this aim.) She was first "banned" in 1963, when Nelson Mandela was on trial. The banning order confined her to Johannesburg, prohibited her from attending meetings or even social gatherings, and made illegal any contact with other banned persons except with special permission.

This, however, allowed her to continue in her employment as a social worker, even though under very great difficulty. So in 1965, not long after Nelson Mandela had been sentenced to life imprisonment, the banning order was intensified; she was now restricted to a particular area of Soweto, and was forbidden to enter even educational or judicial premises. So she had to give up her job and take one as a saleswoman. The South African authorities then feared that she might publish the truth about their persecution of her, so the following year (1966) the banning order was further strengthened, this time to make it illegal for her to publish anything at all. And in 1967 she was imprisoned for 14 months for breaking the banning order; she had fallen foul of the regulations on a visit to her husband on Robben Island.

This was still not enough to break her spirit, or compel her to abandon her attempts to strengthen and sustain her husband. So in 1969 she was arrested with others and, although ill, interrogated without pause for five consecutive days and nights, by relays of interrogators. (This is the technique known as "the conveyors," which was invented by Stalin's torturers and taken over in its entirety by their South African equivalents. The team applying it to Mrs. Mandela was under the direction of Major Swanepoel, then South Africa's most notorious torturer.)

Mrs. Mandela, along with all her co-defendants, was acquitted (twice, as a matter of fact, the charges being withdrawn the first time and new ones substituted more or less at random). By now it was September, 1970, and she had then spent some 16 months in solitary confinement. After the acquittal she was banned again, being confined once more to a specific area of Soweto. When this banning order expired in 1975 no new one was at first imposed, and Mrs. Mandela was able to travel the country, and speak freely to other people, for the first time in 12 years. It did not last; after the Soweto riots in 1976 she was arrested, held for five months without trial, and released into the strictest banning yet — house arrest.

Still her spirit was unbroken; so the government decided on a further refinement of their torture. She was abruptly banished to a "location" in Brandfort, in a remote Afrikaner village in a barren area of the Orange Free State, an area with which she has no connections.

She is, of course banned there; she is also confined to her home every night, throughout every weekend and on all public holidays.

Naturally, she may not attend any gatherings; naturally, she may not publish anything nor may anything she says be published.

And now we come to the latest twist of South Africa's knife.

Two women, Jackie Bosman and Ilona Kleinschmidt, visited Mrs. Mandela, having driven the 500 miles from Johannesburg. It had been decided to prosecute her again for breaking her banning order, and the women were invited to give evidence against her. They naturally refused, and were themselves charged, and sentenced to four months and three months imprisonment, respectively. They appealed, and the appeal was dismissed; they must therefore serve their sentences.

Throughout the years of her suffering, Mrs. Mandela has experienced continuous interference with her letters: in this, of course, she is not unique among the victims of South Africa's rulers, but she seems to be subject to a particularly vicious form of it. Some letters are allowed through, some have passages deleted, some are simply stolen before reaching her. This means that she is unable to carry on any normal correspondence, since any meaningful exchange of letters depends on continuity.

The authorities have also made it extremely difficult for her to be reached by telephone; she herself has no telephone, of course, but there is a call-box at which she waits by arrangement with her friends so that they can call her there. But callers now find that either there is no answer, or that the telephone is picked up and immediately put down.

Throughout all this, and a great deal more, Mrs. Mandela's courage remains unbroken and her spirit undismayed. She is a living reproach to the foul thing that rules her country, and her reproach lies precisely in the fact that she remains undaunted by all the persecution they can visit upon her, thus demonstrating that their rule of lies, oppression and murder cannot prevail forever. I salute this gallant and loyal defender of the faith, and conclude with a letter she has written to her friends, among whom, surely, all friends of freedom and of the best in mankind must be numbered, even if they have never met her:

My dearest friends,

Towards the completion of my third year in exile, I have reflected a great deal about those who have made it possible for me to pull through the experience without a flinch because I knew that I had a pillar on which I could lean, pillars which gave me the necessary morale and the strength to maintain one's dignity in the blistering inferno of racial hatred. I have tried the best to communicate with all such friends — when you didn't hear from me, you must always know it was because of a situation which is not of my making. This is just a note to thank you for making it possible for me to know I belong to a family of mankind and that I am convinced more than ever before that one day my husband and I and my people will express this gratitude in a befitting manner. Have a happy Christmas and know that in turn I shall one day also attach some significance to Christmas because you made it possible for me to think there is reality in life and that such reality will come to the masses of my people. Your solidarity means so much to me. Yours in the brotherhood of man and love to each member of your family.

Yours always,
Nomzano Winnie Mandela

☆ Botha's reform package only PR-deep ☆

By LES PAYNE
Newsday

"Must make adaptations, otherwise we will die"

A propaganda myth is threatening to take root in the mind of the American public and thus attain a sort of reality. South Africa, so this myth goes, is changing its system of racial apartheid.

The rumors of revisionism in Pretoria seem, at first glance, to be not totally without foundation. Prime Minister Pieter W. Botha has suggested that his country alter its laws prohibiting interracial sex and marriage. He supports giving African trade unions the right for the first time to negotiate under national industrial conciliation laws. And he has suggested that government-designated black homeland areas be expanded to include fertile land and be allowed to form a federation with independent African states in the area.

South African whites "must make adaptations, otherwise we will die," Botha declared. His white countrymen, he says, must give up some of their almost unlimited privileges to avoid an armed revolution like those next door in Mozambique, Angola and Rhodesia.

Actually, Botha's proposals do not change the essence of apartheid. They are merely small steps that carry the danger of drawing the world's attention away from the fundamental evil of European-imposed racial oppression.

As Botha hoped, the suggestions have caught the fancy of the U.S. media that keeps watch on that forlorn republic. Botha's plan is being presented to American readers as a promising initiative through which, as Botha declared, South Africa can avoid an armed revolution.

The proposals, however, have outraged the rank and file of Botha's ruling Nationalist Party, even though the prime minister's recommendations are nothing more than cosmetic changes designed to make apartheid palatable to the world community.

The party's 2.5 million members have just learned of the plan, which was concocted in 1972 by the Broederbond, a small, secret group of Afrikaners who direct the Nationalist Party.

The Broederbond is wealthy, and well-armed, and it draws from the concepts of the Brown Shirts, the Klan and the Third Reich. Beginning in 1972, the Broederbond, to make apartheid acceptable to the world, decided to accept "the elimination of unnecessary discrimination," but decreed that "measures necessary to keep political control of the white man's future in his hands must not disappear. Thus no form of political power-sharing with (black Africans) is acceptable."

Eschel Rhoodie — the information official central to a $70-million international propaganda scandal that forced Botha's predecessor, John Vorster, to resign — warned the country that it should no longer attempt to "sell the unsellable." The world, he cautioned, holds a public disdain for institutionalized racism. He suggested that South Africa emphasize the positive: the desegregated boxing matches, the consolidated drinking fountains and other such tinkering with "petit apartheid" as Botha has recently announced.

Some in the media have mistakenly portrayed Botha's liberalizing shuffle as a reasoned march toward a civilized racial policy. But the African masses are not deceived.

Having marked their point of no return with the 1976 Soweto rebellion, Africans totally reject racism in all its forms. And they seek the franchise, land, bread, freedom. Their enemy is the entire European apartheid superstructure.

Barred from the national discussion, the blacks in South Africa have decided, as did their brethren in Rhodesia, that they have no choice but to pick up the gun to open a new dialogue.

Millimetering modern misses

Katharine Whitehorn

Surveying the British woman and her mate is rapidly becoming a national industry. Only weeks after the riveting news that fat women and thin men (and fat women and fat men) tend to stick together longer than thin women and fat men, there came a survey from Dr. Norman Mills of London University which reveals that the English woman is slowly straightening out — less bust, less hips and a bigger waist.

The survey was commissioned by a bra firm which needed to be able to forecast in millimetres. But it could not be said that we were changing all that fast: in fact, the pace would make a glacier seem in a hurry. And the changes are not taking place equally all over Britain: women in the north are shorter and stouter; young women in London thinner, and women in the east a good 12 pounds heavier than women in the London area.

The survey proved that more married women were short and stout than single women; and that British women have absolutely not given up wearing bras. Not that most of us thought they had. Only those who are also in a position to give up bikini tops are usually comfortable without a bra, never mind what it looks like.

Anyone remember those pictures of panting Greek Bacchantes, holding their breasts with their hands as they ran? Most of us haven't even one spare hand for that, let alone two — though I suppose it does give a new twist to the saying of one wise old editor of mine, who, seeing me dropping my hand-bag, my parcels, my briefcase, observed: "there'll be no real equality for women till they get three hands."

It may, too, have dawned on quite a few people by now — including women who are not too keen to be assaulted in the street — that the girl who resolutely refuses to please men by wearing a bra and shaving under arms, and so appears au nature in a bursting T-shirt, is just about as sexually provocative as it's possible to get without actually wearing rubber knickers.

Be that as it may, I still feel confused about the way our shape is changing. It is not, after all, what the statistics say (even in the somewhat unlikely event that they're right) that is important, but what they mean, and what, for example, can you deduce about the shortness and fatness of the married?

That tubby little ladies say "yes" to the first man who asks them, while willowy ones with higher hopes are apt to hold out longer? Not, surely, that you actually sink and spread once you get married.

What do we deduce from the fact that fat men and fat women stay together — that both of them find it too much bother to heave themselves away from the marital home? Dr. Anthony Harris, the earnest soul who took 10 years doing the research, says such things show the sexual compatability of certain physical types; but might it not be that fat women put up with their husbands more tolerantly than thin ones, either through doubts about finding another, or because the raw, hard facts of marriage do not penetrate their cosy exteriors?

It might even be that the thin men, if they do stay thin, none the less get the benefit of some cracking good cooking from those podgy, floury hands.

Again, when they say the women in eastern Britain weigh more than women in the west, is it the potatoes, or the cultural climate, or the need, if you live on the flat plains of East Anglia (once a marsh) to be fairly solid lest you get blown away?

Or it could be that it is simply colder in the east, so the women automatically put on fat to keep warm — just as thighs, we are told, got brawnier during the mini-skirt era, which was nature's way of protecting the girls from catching their death of cold.

All the same, women do change for psychological and sociological reasons, I'm sure of it. The enormous Edwardian bosom wasn't a product of brassieres. The brassiere wasn't invented till after the First World War, a fact that feminists who see it as the symbol of centuries of oppression tend to forget. But breeding was at a premium: the big-bosomed, big-hipped motherly figure embodied women's aspirations, and it seemed to be produced by sheer ambition.

Similarly, when you look at old family photographs of the Twenties, the girls didn't just dress flatter — they were flatter — flatter than their mothers, anyway. And it happens, with women, far too suddenly for any sort of natural selection to be taking place — that would take several generations at the least, not a mere matter of a decade or two.

So if British women are getting very, very slightly less maternal in shape, it may really mean they are also getting very slightly less maternal in outlook. Though, like everything else to do with the changing state of women, they have only to move a millimetre to have the men screaming they've already moved a mile.

Afghans expel journalists

In London, British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher today declared her government's support for moving the Olympic Games from Moscow in retaliation for the Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan.

Officials of the Carter administration in Washington say they are considering the idea of trying to shift the Olympic site as an alternative to boycotting the Games. A boycott has found little official favor among the NATO allies.

Canadian Prime Minister Joe Clark has said he would prefer moving the Games to boycotting them.

In Ottawa, an external affairs department spokesman said the Canadian government is sounding out Western states about moving the summer Olympic Games out of Moscow.

Dick Pound, head of the Canadian Olympic Association, said in Montreal he wants to meet with external affairs officials to discuss exactly where Canada stands on a possible change of venue for the 1980 Summer Games.

Mrs. Thatcher told the House of Commons that Britain should act with its allies in an approach to the International Olympic Committee, which would have to make the decision on changing the site. The president of the IOC, Lord Killanin, has insisted that the long-planned Moscow Games must go on.

French Sports Minister Jean-Pierre Soisson, on the other hand, reiterated today that "there is no reason" for France to consider such a boycott. "I believe that if the forthcoming Games are not held in Moscow, they will not be held in any other place," he added.

Carter administration officials have said that even if U.S. allies do not accept the change of venue or boycott idea, the United States might try to organize a solely American boycott.

In other developments:

— Prime Minister Indira Gandhi retreated from her previous much-criticized support of the Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan.

— In New York, air traffic controllers at metropolitan area airports are refusing to handle flights of the Soviet airline Aeroflot because of the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

The next scheduled Aeroflot flight was due to arrive at Kennedy Airport at 3 p.m. Friday.

Waldheim forming shah inquiry

Times News Services

UN Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim has begun to assemble an international committee to inquire into Iranian charges against the deposed shah and the United States, ABC News reported Wednesday.

Waldheim, who cancelled a scheduled news conference, gave "indications he was deep in secret negotiations with Iranian officials," the network said in its evening news program.

UN officials declined comment on Waldheim's reported activities, ABC said, adding that it was nevertheless convinced of the accuracy of its report.

At the same time, diplomatic sources said Mexico may introduce a Security Council resolution linking freedom for American hostages in Tehran to an international inquiry on the alleged crimes of the ousted shah of Iran.

The sources said Mexico, which became a Security Council member in January, was considering a plan to bring the Iran crisis to the Council again.

A Soviet veto Sunday killed a U.S.-sponsored resolution calling for economic sanctions against Iran until the 50 hostages held in the U.S. Embassy are released.

Meanwhile, in Tehran, Iranians marched through the streets to celebrate the first anniversary of the shah's flight from power.

The militants holding the U.S. Embassy announced they have uncovered more documents "proving" some of their 50 American captives are spies.

Earlier Wednesday, reports from Iranian exile sources in Paris and Arab newspapers said authorities uncovered a plot against Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's regime involving a group of army officers and Freemasons, members of an international secret society.

In a warning apparently directed to Japan and other U.S. allies, Iran's oil minister, Ali Akbar Moinfar, said any country joining the United States in imposing economic sanctions would lose its Iranian oil supplies.

"It all depends on which countries participate," he said at a news conference in Tehran broadcast by Iran's state radio and monitored in London. "Any country which does will be deprived of oil."

In other developments:

— Japan agreed in principle today to join the United States in imposing economic sanctions against Iran but sought American assurance of oil supplies to counter the Iranian threat to retaliate by cutting off shipments.

— The ABC television network has purchased broadcast rights to David Frost's interview with the deposed shah and will show the interview tonight on its 20-20 news magazine program.

Market madness eases

Times News Services

North American stock markets calmed down a little today after hectic trading Wednesday.

By 2 p.m. EST, the Toronto stock market was up sharply again, boosting the TSE 300 index up 16.55 to 1963.38.

More than 9 million shares were traded, compared to almost 16 million at the same time Wednesday.

At New York, the stock market was mixed, steadying after some early selling.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, off more than two points in early trading, was up 2.98 at 868.17 by 2 p.m.

A horde of investors attracted by a booming market propelled the Vancouver Stock Exchange to dizzying heights of activity this week.

Harried traders shouted themselves hoarse Wednesday to shatter two exchange records as 12,465,112 shares worth $26,586,803 changed hands. Previous highs were 11.4 million shares worth $10.3 million set April 10, 1972.

Prices were generally up, especially among the scores of penny mining and petroleum shares which form the bulk of the exchange's business.

The exchange has been closing an hour earlier all week to allow its overworked staff to keep pace with mounting paperwork.

"A flood of money is coming into Vancouver and the rest of North America in response to the fantastic increase in the price of gold and silver, and oil, gas and mining stocks," said Angus McPhail, chairman of Continental Carlisle Douglas Ltd.

However, Jim Allworth, research analyst with Pemberton Securities Ltd., said he believes heavy volumes are due more to an increase in speculation at the local level.

"The people who play the stock exchange are playing it harder and the overwhelming reason for this is that they are reacting to the increase in prices of gold and silver.

In Toronto, the stock market hit a record Wednesday in the heaviest trading in 16 years.

The TSE 300 index closed up 2.33 points to 1946.83, setting a record high for the eighth consecutive day.

Ten of the 14 stock groups in the composite index advanced, led by real estate and construction.

The transportation, paper and forest, oil and gas, consumer products and industrial products stock groups closed at all-time highs.

The second busiest session in New York Stock Exchange history wound up in a virtual standoff between buyers and sellers Wednesday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up more than eight points at the outset, was off 3.41 at 865.19 by the close. Other indicators were mixed.

The Dow had climbed nearly 40 points, on consistently heavy volume over the preceding seven trading days.

NYSE volume reached 67.70 million shares, a total surpassed only by the 81.62 million that changed hands last Oct. 10 as traders scrambled to react to new credit-tightening moves by the Federal Reserve Board.

In London, gold hit a record $765 U.S. an ounce Wednesday.

civic affairs

by norman gidney

What's this, the Chamber of Commerce telling prospective settlers and investors there's a "foul anchorage" on the Victoria waterfront?

And that Metchosin is "smelling of oil"?

Those bits of bad news — an explanation of how Foul Bay got its name, and the meaning of the Indian name — are about all that qualify as doom and gloom in the glossy, 58-page color brochure titled Victoria which the chamber sends to people with queries about the area.

"Roses bloom at Christmas and bamboo grows naturally," it says. "The area enjoys milder winters than any other part of Canada."

Well, most winters anyway.

Golf and boating can be enjoyed year-round, it says. Would you believe almost every year?

The book got a close examination this week as the people at the central public library scratched their heads and wondered why they've been blamed for supposedly holding up a cracked mirror to Victoria's pleasant face.

Several chamber members have criticized the job the library did in answering inquiries from people who want to move here, suggesting it sent out only bad news like facts on ferry strikes, rainfall and the high unemployment rate.

Saanich mayor Mel Couvelier said the library service was "abysmal" and chamber president Cedric Steele said he thought inquiries were handled "in a rather sterile manner."

The chamber used to do this on its own — it's called the settler inquiry service — but in 1976 the intermunicipal committee cut off its $2,500 grant and decided the people in the public library's reference section could do it just as well.

The library can't understand the complaints.

"We were a little bit shaken and taken aback. It's the one thing we think we do better than anyone else in the community," says library director Don Miller.

When the chamber took back the task in mid-1979 after a hiatus of three years, the library heard not a word of complaint from the people who are once again the prime promoters of the Victoria image overseas.

"Rather peremptorily it stopped. We were never told why," says Miller.

The chamber said it was a promotion job members thought they were better equipped to do, and the library didn't argue.

Unlike the chamber, the library got no special funds or extra staff to do the job, which is estimated to cost at least $4,000 a year.

"We had taken it on as a civic duty. We didn't mind their getting it back, but we don't like getting kicked in the pants," he says.

Where did the picture of the library disseminating bad news come from?

Helen McKay, head of the library's information services division, has a fat file of letters of thanks. And very few complaints. In this sort of business, it's usually the other way around.

These are typical:

Mississauga, Ont.: "I feel a wave of deep appreciation is called for as you have gone to considerable trouble to answer our needs. We have found the photocopies extremely useful."

Winterburn, Alta.: "My wife and I are thrilled to receive such a response to our request. Over the past 20 years I have travelled in Asia and Europe and on many, many occasions required information but none so thoughtfully compiled as you have done."

Woodstock, Ont.: "I wish to thank you for the lovely book Victoria. It is so descriptive and covers all the information I had been hunting for."

Perhaps it's because the library doesn't fob people off with form letters and gives each writer custom service. It goes out of its way to answer some detailed questionnaires and shopping lists.

One woman wanted to know the price of two litres of milk and a loaf of bread in Victoria stores. A library employee took the trouble to find out. A Winnipegger asked bluntly: How many days of rain and fog does Victoria have?

What's the library to do, lie and say all the precipitation comes at night?

"The way we handle inquiries is strictly factual. We do not editorialize. If someone wants to know about the unemployment rate, we tell him," says Miller.

The chamber says this gives Victoria a black eye, but I'd rather see the curious given this truthful picture than the glowing, rosy-pink portrait the chamber likes to paint.

The irony of it is that much of the information the library sends out comes from the chamber's own brochure, which the chamber provided to the library free of charge while it did the job.

Most people who inquired about Victoria in general terms got the brochure, although if someone had only a specific question he got a specific answer.

Some of the figures in the weather reports the library mailed out (more bad news, grumped the chamber) in fact came from the chamber's own book.

The library, of course, will continue to answer inquiries which come directly to it.

Answering questions is one of the many significant but unsung tasks performed by this hard-worked, underfunded institution.

The chamber last week got a $4,000 grant from the intermunicipal committee, subject to approval by each of the four core municipalities, to carry on its promotion work.

Perhaps now it can spare 17 cents to mail out one special communication: a letter of apology to the library.

Big game, big losers in highway mayhem

By DEREK SIDENIUS

Virginia McIntyre and sign that doesn't appear in manual

The ministry of highways and provincial wildlife branch are trying to develop a way of reducing the annual carnage of big game on the highways.

But they aren't having much success.

Next to hunters, vehicles and trains remain the biggest single killers of big game in B.C.

Each year thousands of deer, moose, and elk are wiped out on roads and railway tracks.

The accidents cause millions of dollars' damage, and on occasions injuries and even fatalities to motorists.

The mishaps are so commonplace they are taken for granted in rural B.C.

As one highways official said: "It's just one of the hazards of travelling here."

But studies now being undertaken by the highways ministry and wildlife branch indicate the problem may be far more serious than anyone had imagined.

Officials now believe at least 16,000 deer are killed each year on B.C. roads — 40 to 50 a day.

Studies carried out in the U.S. suggest only a small fraction of wildlife-related accidents are ever reported.

This is corroborated by a survey of two test areas — stretches of highways between Grand Forks and Christina Lake and Penticton and Kelowna, both chosen for their high deer traffic.

Researchers noted that over a six-month period in 1977-78 there were 99 deer carcasses removed from the road in the first test area and 200 from the other.

Yet the number of wildlife-related motor-vehicle accidents reported in each area was only 10 and 27 respectively.

The kill counts by themselves tell only part of the sad story.

It's been estimated that for every animal found dead on the road two others managed to wander off into the bush out of sight to die.

If those guidelines are applied to B.C., wildlife kills last year reached a staggering 16,000, government officials say.

The Insurance Corporation of B.C. handles 2,000 animal collision claims each year, the majority involving deer.

At an average claim of $1,000, the total bill is about $2 million.

Fortunately the injury risk is fairly low. A 1965 study in Michigan noted only 218 injuries out of 7,000 animal-related accidents for a injury probability of about three per cent.

The damage in some cases, however, can be inordinately high. The insurance claim for a semi-tractor trailer demolished after it hit a moose on the Yellowhead Highway near Jasper a few years ago was set at $179,400.

Even greater losses are experienced by railways.

A CP Rail train was derailed in the Crowsnest Pass after it crashed into a pack of elk. Twenty-three of the animals were killed.

The CNR is forever clobbering game trapped in the tracks by snowdrifts between Robson and Prince Rupert. In 1968, the death toll of moose alone was 598.

Highways officials such as Mike Kent, a senior environment co-ordinator, say there is no easy solution.

He says the immediate and most pressing need is to pinpoint the areas where major deer problems occur.

A $10,000 research project is under way.

Surprisingly, data on animal kills wasn't normally kept anywhere in the province until two years ago.

Now all the police departments and highways district offices have been asked to co-operate.

But the big challenge is reducing the number of animal kills.

Kent says several devices have been tried in the U.S. — mirrors, underpasses, fencing, even a microwave eye beam that automatically lights up a warning flasher when an animal crosses the beam.

One of the more promising inventions is a special reflector called swareflex which has been used with some success in Europe.

The reflector, mounted at short intervals, reflects a red band of light at right angles across the road when a vehicle's headlight's strike it.

In theory animals are afraid to cross the band and don't venture on to the road.

Swareflex reflectors are being installed on a seven-kilometre section of Highway 3 between Grand Forks and Christina Lake at a cost of $2,000 a kilometer.

Another seven kilometre section will be left the way it is for comparison purposes.

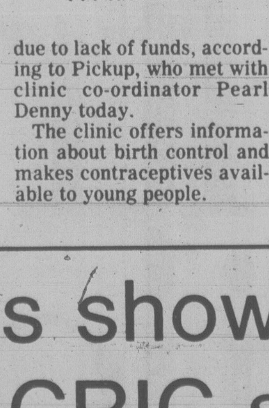
Kent says that if the reflectors work they could provide one of the cheapest ways of dealing with the problem.

There's only one cheaper method — making driver's more aware of the problems of wildlife using roads.

In that regard there's been little in the way of leadership from the Motor-Vehicle Branch.

In the driver's examination manual no mention is made of the ubiquitous yellow jumping deer hazard sign.

'Deal with reality' Pickup tells Mair



PICKUP

. . . backs Smith

Greater Victoria school board chairman Carol Pickup said today she agrees with Education Minister Brian Smith's refusal to develop a province-wide sex education course for B.C. schools.

Pickup supported Smith's comment Wednesday that local school districts and parents will have to decide for themselves if they want to teach sex education.

"With a sensitive subject like birth control parents must be involved or the program will fall flat on its face," she said.

If Mair really wants to help, he should give money to programs that already exist and provide funds for new programs, Pickup.

She said Greater Victoria's sex education program has been operating as an "extra" for a number of years at the expense of local taxpayers.

And a recent request for funding by the Victoria Birth Control Clinic was turned down by the health ministry due to lack of funds, according to Pickup, who met with clinic co-ordinator Pearl Denny today.

The clinic offers information about birth control and makes contraceptives available to young people.

Mair announced earlier this week he wants to reduce the number of abortions in B.C. by improving sex education programs.

Sex education is an alternative to abortion, Mair said Tuesday in a letter to hospital boards opposing abortion as a method of birth control.

He said the rate of abortions in B.C. is unacceptable.

Pickup said Mair's answer to the high abortion rate is "simplistic and doesn't deal with reality."

Unwanted pregnancies occur for many reasons and lack of birth control knowledge is just one small factor, said Pickup, a registered nurse.

The school district's program, called Family Life, is taught in Grades 7 to 11, by counsellors Karen Unruh and Roy Christie.

In their questions about sex and birth control, many students demonstrate knowledge of the subjects, Unruh said.

Christie said teenagers don't practise birth control for a number of complicated reasons that may have more to do with social conditioning than sexual ignorance.

Some boys feel its macho to get a girl pregnant, he said.

And some girls don't want to prepare for sex because they feel guilty about it and believe a spontaneous act is less sinful than a premeditated one.

"It's wrong to home in on birth control, it's one part of an all-round program," Christie said.

The program covers a variety of issues concerning sexuality including values and attitudes, communications, and new developments in contraceptives.

Christie said the program has been going for 16 years without any government assistance.

"Traditionally, Social Credit has ignored our program — turned a blind eye for years," said Christie.

Rentex agrees to refund plan

A controversial rental accommodation agency has agreed to make several changes in its method of operations to answer criticisms by customers about its low success rate in finding apartments for people.

Ald. Robin Blencoe said today Robert Carstairs, owner of the local Rentex franchise, has agreed to refund the $35 fee if Rentex doesn't find accommodation a customer wants within three months

Another concession will allow someone who finds an apartment on his own to take up the unused part of his three-month contract with Rentex at any time in the future.

Other changes include an indefinite extension if the customer doesn't like any of the listings Rentex provides and dating of all Rentex listings.

Many people had complained that when they called the landlords listed by Rentex the apartment was gone.

Now, with all listings dated, Blencoe said an apartment-hunter won't have to waste time chasing accommodation that may have been already rented.

Blencoe said he is still not completely satisfied with Rentex but had tried to find a way for the company to regulate itself without city council enacting formal controls, as Vancouver did recently.

Rentex merely moved to adjacent Burnaby and continues to operate in the Vancouver area.

"People should be aware that they don't guarantee finding you a place," said the alderman.

Many of the listings Rentex has are already advertised in the newspapers and available to anyone for 20 cents.

It has some exclusive listings but "I do not think it's a very high percentage," he added.

"People should realize what kind of service they are getting when they pay their money."

If complaints continue after today, Blencoe said he will bring the matter up at city council for action.

"I don't particularly appreciate this kind of business but they say they're providing a service, they're in the Better Business Bureau and they're accepted."

$20M hospital contract

The provincial government today announced award of a $20 million contract to Dawson and Hall Ltd. of Vancouver for the second and major phase of the new Victoria General Hospital on Helmcken Road.

The firm was low bidder.

This second phase will see completion of diagnostic and treatment facilities, the most complex element of the 500-bed hospital.

Total construction cost for the hospital is being shared on a 60-40 basis by the province and the Capital Region Hospital District.

The final phase, the nursing towers, are expected to go to tender early this year.

The towers and diagnostic and treatment complex are scheduled for completion simultaneously so the hospital may open in late 1982.

First floor of the diagnostic wing will contain the central plant and hospital services. The second floor will include emergency, daycare surgery, medical imaging, education, and physical medicine. The third floor will house obstetrics, surgery and the laboratory.

The hospital will replace the existing downtown VGH.

Grocery store robbed

City police are looking for a young knife-wielding bandit who held up the L & N Market, 530 Craigflower, Wednesday night.

A police spokesman said the youth, wearing a stocking mask and a blue toque down to his eyes, entered the store about 8:30 p.m. and confronted the proprietress who was sorting pop bottles in a back room.

Ordering her not to move, he took a fistful of bills from the till and stuffed them into a plastic bag.

He then dashed out the door and was last seen running west on Belton.

Police are unsure how much money was taken but believe it was less than $100.

There was a 10-minute delay in reporting the robbery to police because the woman speaks little English and had to get her husband who was at work at the B.C. Forest Product's mill on Gorge Road.

The suspect was described as in his mid or late teens, five feet six inches tall, slim and with dark shoulder-length hair.

MLAs show their colors on BCRIC share buying

STUPICH

. . . he bought

The statutory financial disclosures by B.C. MLAs show a definite split along party lines on ownership of shares in the B.C. Resources Investment Corp.

Most NDP members turned up their noses at the share distribution they attacked in the legislature.

One of them, Al Passarell of Atlin, added the following note to his disclosure form:

"Wouldn't even pick up my free shares so the bank would make its $2.50 service charge."

However, three of his colleagues didn't let the party's official stand stop them. Dave Stupich, Don Lockstead and Gary Lauk list BCRIC shares among their assets.

As expected, most Socred MLAs went for BCRIC in a big way. Four of them, including one cabinet minister, apparently failed to take advantage of the Socred-promoted share offer.

Universities Minister Pat McGeer, Socred caucus chairman Jack Kempf, Speaker Harvey Schroeder and former transportation minister Jack Davis show no BCRIC holdings on their financial statements.

Fifty-three of the 57 members got their semi-annual declarations in by the official deadline, midnight Tuesday.

Statements from the other four — three Socreds and one New Democrat — are delayed in the mail.

After 60 years Burns is a star

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — George Burns celebrates his 84th birthday this week confessing that he is the only quintuple-threat man in Hollywood today.

He is a movie star, TV star, nightclub star, best-selling author and now a recording star. Burns modestly failed to include lover which would, of course, have made him a sextuple-threat man.

The oldtime vaudeville trouper — whose show biz nadir was a seal act billed as "Captain Betz & Flipper" — lit a cigar at his lunch table at Hillcrest Country Club and beamed contentedly.

After 60 years as a starving vaudevillian and then straight man for his late wife, Gracie Allen, Burns has finally become a superstar in his own right.

How come?

"It's a matter of breaks," Burns said. "I didn't have to become a star until now. With Gracie I wrote the ideas and she did 'em. After Gracie's death I went into show business.

"Until then I did nothing for 38 years but ask her how her brother was feeling and smoke a cigar. She got the laughs.

"Before Gracie I changed vaudeville acts every time I got fired. One of my acts was so bad I was on a bill that headlined 'Swain's Cats and Rats.'

TORONTO (CP) — Prices were slightly higher in moderate trading on the Canadian bond market Wednesday, although international instability continued to overshadow. $1B Shell Oil income up 23% over 1978

NEW YORK (AP) — Shell Oil Co.'s net income was slightly more than $1 billion in 1979, an increase of about 23 per cent over 1978's total, President John Bookout said Wednesday.

He said at a press luncheon that Shell, the eighth-largest oil company in the U.S., expects to boost spending on petroleum exploration and production, refinery and coal mine development and other projects by eight per cent in 1980 to $2.7 billion.

He said the 1979 earnings will be reported in detail on Jan. 24, but Bokout said the year's per-share earnings would be around $7.25.

Meanwhile, oil industry sources said Shell, which raised wholesale gasoline prices by 1.1 cents a litre last week, is increasing wholesale prices by another 1.1 cents effective midnight Wednesday.

A Shell spokesman, Norman Altstedter, said he could "not confirm or deny" the report.

Bookout said U.S. gasoline consumption in 1979 was seven to 7½ per cent lower than it was a year earlier as prices rose and as federal rules gradually increased auto fuel efficiency.

In 1978, Shell earned $813.6 million or $5.45 a share, on sales of $11.1 billion.

Public Notice

In accordance with Section 99.1 (4) of the Canada Elections Act, representatives of the C.R.T.C. met with the representatives of nine (9) registered political parties on 19 December, 1979 to discuss an allocation of the 6½ hours of broadcasting time which broadcasters must make available for political advertising relating to the Federal General Election to be held 18 February, 1980.

The nine (9) registered political parties were unable to arrive at an agreement concerning the allocation of time. The Commission therefore issued a proposal on 24 December, 1979, as required by Section 99.1 (6) of the Elections Act. The parties were requested to file objections to that proposal by 5:00 p.m., 31 December, 1979. A number of objections were received; the Commission then consulted with all parties on their objections and on the distribution of the time allocated to the Union Populaire Party, which by that time had been de-registered by the Chief Electoral Officer.

The Commission met on 4 January, 1980 to issue a binding proposal as required by the Act. The Commission therefore now announces the following time allocation to each party:

	Minutes	Percent
Progressive Conservative Party of Canada	143	36.67
Liberal Party of Canada	137	35.13
New Democratic Party of Canada	64	16.40
Social Credit Party of Canada	22	5.64
Communist Party of Canada	6	1.54
Libertarian Party of Canada	6	1.54
Marxist-Leninist Party of Canada	6	1.54
Parti rhinoceros	6	1.54

In arriving at these figures, the Commission first allocated six (6) minutes to each of the registered parties. The remaining time was divided among those parties with members in the House of Commons. The division was based on three factors: the percentage of popular vote in the last election, the number of seats in the House at dissolution and the number of candidates fielded in the last election. In this calculation each of the first two factors was given double weight and third, single.

The Commission however wishes to emphasize that while those factors were considered relevant under the present circumstances, the above allocation is for purposes of the current election and should not necessarily be taken as a precedent for future elections, where other factors and their relative importance may lead to a different distribution.

The advertising period commences 20 January, 1980 and ends at midnight, 16 February, 1980.

Ottawa.
January 9, 1980.

J. G. Patenaude,
Secretary General.

THE COMMERCE R.S.P. BLUE RIBBON RATE
12½%*

TAKE AN INTEREST IN YOUR FUTURE.
A Commerce R.S.P. is more than a savings plan with tax benefits. It's a wise investment.
With a Commerce Retirement Savings Plan you gain an income tax deduction today, while providing an income for your retirement tomorrow. Annual maximum contributions vary, but our branch personnel can help you calculate your personal contribution limit.

MAKE THE MOST OF YOUR TAX SAVINGS.
If you don't have the money right now to set up a Commerce R.S.P., it could be to your advantage to borrow money to put into your Plan. Not only will you be able to deduct your contribution from your taxable income, but you'll also be able to claim the interest on your loan as a deductible item for the year that it's paid.
If you're married, it may be to your advantage to put part or all of your allowable contribution into an R.S.P. for your Spouse, and deduct that contribution from your earned income. Loan interest is not tax deductible on loans for a spousal R.S.P.

MAKE EASY MONTHLY CONTRIBUTIONS.
You may find it easier to contribute on a monthly basis to your R.S.P., instead of making a lump sum payment. If so, you can take advantage of the Commerce STEPS program, ("Start Twelve Easy Payments and Save"). It's a simple way to make "easy to handle" monthly payments. And for your added convenience, we can automatically withdraw your R.S.P. contributions from any one of your accounts at any financial institution in Canada.

TODAY'S THE DAY TO START YOUR R.S.P.
The deadline for 1979 Tax Year Contributions is February 29, 1980, so drop in to any Commerce branch today to start your R.S.P. Chances are, you won't have to go far to find one. Our Bank will welcome you at more branches than any other bank in Canada.

*ANNUAL INTEREST IS CALCULATED ON THE MINIMUM MONTHLY BALANCE, COMPOUNDED SEMI-ANNUALLY, AND THE RATE IS SUBJECT TO CHANGE WITHOUT NOTICE.

FOR SALE
A MANSION
BY SAMUEL McCLURE

At the head of a cul-de-sac in fashionable Oak Bay sits an .81 acre estate, flowered, lawned and quiet. Within the grounds the guest cottage unobtrusively takes its corner and the four-car garage and port stand quietly ready.

These buildings defer to the mangificent mansion of the classic Elizabethan Tudor variety. Lavishly appointed with the dark beams and leaded glass so typical of a bygone craftsmanship.

There are 6400 glorious square feet of living area which many years ago were deferentially converted into six self-contained tenancies.

The property now stands ready for the discrimininating new owner to convert it back to its original splendour or to astutely acquire it as a rare investment.

Hawks fly past as Cougars stall

Mike Blaisdell scored the first and last goals for Regina Pats, who edged visiting Victoria Cougars 4-3 in a Western Hockey League game Wednesday night.

The loss dropped Victoria one point behind Portland Winter Hawks, who rallied from a three-goal deficit in the third period to edge Lethbridge Broncos in overtime, in the Western Division.

In the only other game, Calgary Wranglers tripped visiting Billings Bighorns, 4-2.

Pats scored three power-play goals as they took a 1-0 lead in the first period, extended it to 3-1 in the second period and held off a Victoria rally in the third.

Captain Doug Wickenheiser had one goal and three assists for Regina to increase his league-leading scoring total to 47 goals and 50 assists for 97 points. Bill Ansell had the other Pats goal.

Len Dawes, Randy Zinn and Greg Adams scored for the Cougars, who took 11 of 21 minor penalties and were outshot 40-26.

Pats goaltender Bart Hunter assisted on Wickenheiser's second-period goal. It was his ninth assist of the season and equalled a WHL record established in 1977-78 by Gord Garbutt of Lethbridge Broncos.

Cougars have now finished a five-game road trip and return home to play host to the New Westminster Bruins at 8:30 p.m. Saturday in Memorial Arena.

In Lethbridge, Jim Dobson scored from behind the net at the 2:03 mark of overtime to earn Winter Hawks the victory.

The Winter Hawks trailed 4-2 after 40 minutes and were behind 5-2 early in the third period before Dobson and his mates fashioned a comeback.

At Calgary, Kelly Kisio and Glenn Merkosky each scored two goals to spark the Calgary win.

It's soon seen, he's not mean - Joe has soul of a pussycat

By WILL GRIMSLEY

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Is Mean Joe Greene really mean?

If so, how mean is he?

Not mean at all, Mean Joe insists. Even his unnerving nickname bears a false connotation.

"I got it when I was playing at North Texas State," he said. "Not because I was rough on the field. The guys tacked it on me because it was a rhyme.

"Mean Greene, get it? They couldn't call me Lean Greene when I weighed 280 pounds."

Mean Joe's massive body shook with the depth of the guffaw that erupted from his own private joke.

He doesn't weigh 280 now. The guide lists him as 6-4 and 260 pounds. In his pads he looks 8-3 and 400.

He is an awesome creature with powerful shoulders, arms like wagon tongues, hands as big as catcher's mitts, a face covered by moustache and sinister beard.

For most of his 11 years in the National Football League, he has epitomized bone-crushing defence for a team that has won three of the last five Super Bowls and is going for an unprecedented fourth against Los Angeles Rams on Sunday.

Now that Oakland's Jack Tatum has hit the stands with his controversial autobiography, They Call Me Assassin, and TV's 60 Minutes has put a spotlight on the extent of football injuries, Mean Joe has emerged as one of the most interviewed personalities of Super Bowl week.

I haven't read the book," Greene said of Tatum's opus, "but I don't like the expression 'assassin.'

"We're sportsmen, we're athletes.

"All players belong to the same fraternity. We try to help our teams win. It's not a personal war. We don't purposely try to maim and destroy. We meet force with force."

Tatum, whose crashing tackle of Darryl Stingley in a 1978 exhibition game left the New England player paralysed from the neck down, has written that to pro defensive players it is not enough just to stop a man.

"My idea of a good hit," Tatum said, "is when the victim wakes up on the sidelines with train whistles blowing in his head." He said he personally strives for knockouts and limp-offs.

Mean Joe insists he never gets that mean.

"I don't believe you can intimidate any team," he said. "That way, you cover up your inadequacies. When you try to intimidate, you take away your concentration."

Greene said if rivals are intimidated by the Steelers it is not because the Super Bowl champs are excessively vicious.

"The word for it is execution," he added. "That is the cornerstone of this team. We execute. You have to beat us. Generally we're not going to beat ourselves."

Mean Joe, off the field, is a bear of a man with the soul of a pussycat. Sometimes he talks like a Rhodes Scholar.

"I used to go in bars thinking guys in there were going to challenge me," he said. "They never did. I am a big fake."

Again, he laughed uproariously.

Speaking of the success of the Steelers, he said, "I perceive it as being personal — self-motivation. If you're a Steeler, you have to perform."

He said his true character is depicted in the TV commercial in which he is leaving a stadium, battle weary and aching, and brushes off a kid offering him a bottle of pop. When he sees the boy's disappointment, he takes the bottle, gulping it down, and then tosses the kid his jersey.

"The commercial took two days, 18 hours, and I drank 18 bottles of pop," Mean Joe recalled. "I never got so many letters, mostly from women — housewives. They see me as a kind man."

Habs busy bouncing back

By Canadian Press

Montreal Canadiens, charging into the second half of the National Hockey League schedule after an uncharacteristic pre-Christmas slumber, won their fifth National Hockey League game in a row Wednesday night, cooling off the Black Hawks 6-1 in Chicago.

The Hawks had lost only twice in their previous 11 games. But opportunistic play around the Chicago net and a tight defensive effort gave the Canadiens the edge.

"My guys gave 120 per cent tonight," coach Claude Ruel said of the Canadiens' effort. "The adjustment they have had to make since I took over as coach has not been easy," said Ruel, who was promoted after Bernie Geoffrion quit Dec. 12 after guiding the team for barely three months. "The fact that I was Scotty Bowman's assistant for seven years did not mean much because it wasn't me they listened to.

"But, tonight, I told my guys the Hawks' defence is their strong point, so you have to forecheck and keep them in their own end, and my guys responded with one of their best efforts of the season."

Guy Lafleur scored his 33rd and 34th goals, Pierre Larouche his 30th and, teamed with Rejean Houle, the line produced nine Montreal points. Bob Gainey, Doug Jarvis and Rick Chartraw chipped in one goal each.

Grant Mulvey scored his 24th of the season late in the middle period after the Black Hawks had fallen behind 3-1. The first period was scoreless.

Elsewhere, Edmonton Oilers downed Washington Capitals 5-2, Boston Bruins defeated Quebec Nordiques 3-1, New York Rangers dumped Winnipeg Jets 4-1, Pittsburgh Penguins edged Toronto Maple Leafs 6-4, Detroit Red Wings slammed Colorado Rockies 5-1, Minnesota North Stars walked over St. Louis Blues 7-3, Atlanta Flames defeated Vancouver Canucks 5-3 and Buffalo Sabres trimmed Los Angeles Kings, 4-2.

The shots on goal totals in Chicago indicated just how close the Canadiens were staying to their checks. The Hawks' Tony Esposito faced 30 shots while Montreal's Michel Larocque handled 17.

The Canadiens held the Hawks to nine shots in the first two periods and won, Lafleur said, "because we never let up on them."

"It was our game plan to forecheck all night — the thing the Hawks did to us when they beat us twice earlier this season. And, when we got the first two goals, the Hawks seemed to lose something and never regained their composure."

Chicago coach Eddie Johnston said after the game he intends to give Esposito a much-needed rest, starting tonight when the Black Hawks play the Flyers in Philadelphia.

India XI grabs big test lead

MADRAS (Reuter) — India's cricketers put themselves in an unassailable position today in the fifth test, scoring 375 for seven in reply to Pakistan's first innings total of 272.

Skipper Sunpl Gavaskar laid the foundation for the score with a hard-worked-for 166 in 597 minutes, including 15 fours and a six.

Only two days play remain — Friday is a rest day — and it seems unlikely that Pakistan, one down in the six-test series, can snatch a win.

Aussies, Kiwis unbeaten

MELBOURNE, Australia (Reuter) — Australia and New Zealand were the only unbeaten countries after four rounds of the pairs event in the world bowls championships today.

England and Scotland were the only nations with the maximum eight points in the triples championship.

In the Leonard Trophy points score for over-all performance, Australia and New Zealand were equal leaders.

Read in form

WENGEN, Switzerland (CP) — The Canadian men's downhill ski team, led by Ken Read of Calgary, continued to dominate the practice runs in preparation for today's and Saturday's World Cup races.

Read recorded the fastest time down Lauberhorn mountain in the morning run and placed fourth on his second run.

Leitch had coached the winners of the novice pairs title for the last five years but his three entries from the Preston Figure Skating Club in Cambridge, Ont., finished out of the medals Wednesday.

Julie Brault, 13, and Richard Gauthier, 18, from Montreal, took the title ahead of two Vancouver entries, but it turned out Leitch had a hand in the victory.

The Quebec skaters, hearing of Leitch's work with young pairs skaters at the Preston club, came here for a month last summer and again 10 days before the national championships started to seek his tutoring.

"The kids that won have trained with us the last week," said Leitch. "It's good for Quebec. I can't remember when Quebec has had a pairs champion."

The novice pairs event was the first to produce medal winners at the four-day national championships which wind up Saturday night.

Bonnie Epp and Leonard Austman of Vancouver were a close second in the novice pairs with Michelle Resch and David Howe, also of Vancouver, placing third.

While Leitch's three entries from the Preston Club finished fourth, fifth and sixth, he had cause to cheer when Preston club-mates Becky Gough and Mark Rowsom placed first in the compulsory short program of the junior pairs event.

The second and third-placed junior pairs are also under Leitch's tutoring Mary Jo Fedy and Tim Mills and Janice Shomphe and Lyndon Johnston.

The junior pairs event ends with the free skating portion tonight.

Also today, senior skaters begin competition with compulsory sections in men's, women's and dance.

Janet Morrissey of Ottawa sets out to defend her women's senior title while Brian Pockar of Calgary is looking for his third men's championship.

"I've been working very hard for this year," said Morrissey who took the women's title from Heather Kemkaran of Toronto, back to try and reclaim it.

"I have a new short program and I've been spending more time on my compulsory figures," said Morrissey.

The senior competitors learned Wednesday they won't find out until next Tuesday who or how many skaters will be chosen for the Olympic and world championship teams.

Results of the first tests were not expected until today but MacVean's compulsory figures result showed him in second place in the junior men's event behind Neil Giroday of North Vancouver while another Ottawa skater, Campbell Sinclair, was third.

Diane Stewart of Toronto was the leader after the women's compulsory figures, ahead of Susan Hetherington of Victoria. Tracy Wilson and Mark Stokes of Vancouver led the field after the junior compulsory dances.

Games playdowns set

Nine men's and six women's rinks from all over Vancouver Island will compete in the B.C. Winter Games curling playdowns this weekend at the Racquet Club of Victoria.

There will be draws at 5 p.m. Friday, 9 a.m., 12:30, 3 and 7 p.m. on Saturday and 12:30 and 3 p.m. Sunday, if necessary.

The playdowns will produce one men's and one women's winner to represent Zone 6 at the Games in Kimberley Mar.1 and 2.

Andrie and her new love are getting along just fine

ANDRIE LEVEY
. . . a successful switch

By MAX LOW

It all started so innocently. Just a few hits around the squash court with tennis friends Nina and Jennifer Bland. A way of staying in shape, really, for the sport she loved.

But the dream of one day being a tennis superstar has slipped from the mind of pretty young Andrie Levey and squash has taken over as her new love. She has embraced it with such passion, in fact, that while 'super' may not yet apply to the game of squash, she is a star in her own right — junior champion of Canada and perhaps one of the best girl players in the world.

She is 18 now but tennis for Andrie Levey began back when she was 10 and was coached by the Racquet Club of Victoria pro at that time, Ray Aldeguer. She was playing in her first tournaments by the time she was 12.

There followed lessons by Roger Skillings and Tim Cummings but the one who helped Andrie most with her tennis was Aussie pro Ian Brady, then out at the now-defunct Island Indoor Tennis Centre.

Tennis for Andrie, though, involved too much pressure from coaches and parents and getting up to practice at 6 a.m. each day before going to school and soon she had had enough. Two years ago, she decided to quit competitive tennis and concentrate instead on the game she'd started as a conditioner — squash.

Though she credits Phil Green, now the pro at the Sussex Squash Club, as the one who got all the juniors here motivated and playing the game well, Andrie has been coached for the last couple of months by Australian Leigh Hendrie.

Now a student at UVic where she's studying to become a teacher (specializing in what else but physical education), Andrie has just returned from a squash-playing trip to England funded jointly by UVic, the B.C. Squash Association and the provincial government.

She made it a success by winning the Sun Life Dorset Junior Open championship in Bournemouth, eliminating the top-seeded girl in the quarter-final and the second seed, Alana Gerard of Britain, in the final.

Andrie then reached the round of 16 in the British open junior championships in Woking before going out to the fourth seed. Unofficially, she was placed ninth in that one but Andrie was still delighted.

"The top juniors from many countries like Australia and Holland were there," she explained. "For girls, it's like the world championships."

Junior-wise, Andrie Levey's time has just about run out. But then, after winning the Canadian Junior (under 19) Girls' Open title (beating an American girl in the final) in Winnipeg last season and earning top ranking nationally, she has done everything she can.

But Andrie will stick with the game of squash, aiming to make the national under-23 squad (the next step up) for international competition and playing in local tournaments.

Trouble with local tournaments, though, is that there aren't enough other women taking part.

"There is only one other "A" division woman player on the Island so unless the Vancouver women come over, we don't have any competition," Andrie explained.

That "other woman" is Sandy Drever, a newcomer from Alberta who, because there was no "A" event for women, last weekend entered the men's "D" class and raised a few chauvinist eyebrows by reaching the final before losing.

Locally, that's what Andrie Levey will have to do, too, to ensure competition and she has her eyes set on the UVic tournament in the first week of February.

"Then comes the really big one in Vancouver and I'll be over there for that," she said with a grin. "There are about 14 or 15 "A" women players in Vancouver but only four of them are really tough."

That, then, is the next goal for Victoria's Princess of Squash . . . to knock the Vancouver foursome off one by one and show she's not only the best girl player in the province but the best woman contestant, too.

ON THE LOCAL SCENE

Five Victorians selected

Five Victoria players — Kelly Meechan, Jill Fougner, Evelyn Greene, Susan Jorgenson and Moira Barr — are among 18 girls selected to attend a three-day tryout camp for the juvenile (under-19) provincial volleyball team.

After the camp, which runs Feb. 22, 23 and 24, the squad of 18 girls will be cut to 12, who will represent B.C. in the Can-Am tournament at Vancouver in May.

Men's and women's teams from California, Oregon, Alberta, Saskatchewan and B.C. will play in the tournament. Last year, B.C. teams won both the men's and women's titles.

McLean, McKay in form

CHEMAINUS — Ian McLean and Don McKay fired two goals each Wednesday night to lead Saanich Braves to a 6-4 decision over Fuller Lake Flyers in a South Vancouver Island Junior "B" Hockey League game at Fuller Lake Arena.

The teams were deadlocked 1-1 after the first period and Saanich, which extended its lead over the runner-up Flyers, took a 4-3 lead going into the final 20 minutes.

Tracy Patterson and Brian Goodwin added single goals for Saanich while Cory Paisley, Ken Ellison, Len Meyer and Mark Brown replied for Flyers.

Ramblers in fourth win

Mt. Douglas Ramblers extended an unbeaten streak to four games in the Greater Victoria Senior High School Girls' Basketball League on Wednesday — but not without some strong opposition from Oak Bay.

Ramblers eventually edged Oak Bay, 52-50.

Lora Favor fired 22 points and Adrian Mason added 14 for the Mt. Doug squad, which trailed 23-21 at half time. Sue Walton was the high gun for Oak Bay with 25 points and Sandy Smith added 12.

In the only other game, Claremont tripped Belmont 54-34 to boost their record to 3-1.

Mona McIvor set the pace for Claremont with 18 points while Donna Carey added 15.

Ivy's, Hendersons prevail

Strathcona Ivy's and Henderson Realty chalked up victories as play resumed Wednesday in the Victoria Senior "B" Men's Basketball League.

Ivy's whipped Cuckoo Clock 96-72 at Central Junior High School and Henderson blasted Trilec Seniors 111-88 at S.J. Willis Junior High School.

Ian Scott and Brian Sutherland-Brown each scored 23 points to lead the Strathcona attack while Dave Mulcahy scored 35 points in a losing cause for Cuckoo Clock.

St. Mikes blank Spartans

St. Michael's University School, sparked by Steve Selina's two tries, blanked Claremont Spartans 26-0 in a high school rugby exhibition match Wednesday.

Chris Snape added a try and kicked a conversion while single four-pointers were chalked up by Mike Erlic, Glen Harris and Brent Henderson.

Hockey clinic set

Juan de Fuca Arena will be the site of a National Coaches Certification Level III clinic sponsored by the B.C. Amateur Hockey Association this weekend.

The clinic gets underway at 7 p.m. Friday and continues through Saturday and Sunday.

Further information may be obtained by telephoning co-ordinator Bob Nicholson at 477-9551.

Forest draws E. Germans

ROME (Reuter) — Nottingham Forest, English holders of the European Cup, were drawn Wednesday against East Germany's Dynamo Berlin — the only east European club left in the soccer competition — in the quarter-finals.

The draw also paired Celtic of Scotland and Spain's Real Madrid, two former winners of the continent's major club trophy.

Ajax Amsterdam of the Netherlands, three times winners of the European Cup, drew Racing Strasbourg of France and the strongly-fancied West Germans, Hamburg SV, were paired with Hajduk Split of Yugoslavia in the two other quarter-finals.

Dynamo Berlin faces a difficult task. But its hopes of taking the Cup to East Europe for the first time since it was inaugurated in 1956 will be boosted by the English club's indifferent league form this season.

Forest lost five of six league games to tumble into the bottom half of the First Division last month.

Real Madrid, the outstanding name in the European Cup, is unlikely to find Celtic an easy hurdle as it strives to life the trophy for the seventh time.

While the Scottish national side labors under Jock Stein's managership, Celtic continues to dominate the league scene and is keen to repeat its 1976 European Cup triumph.

The best clash of the round could be one involving Racing Strasbourg and Ajax.

The Dutch champions, winners of the European Cup between 1971 and 1973, have scored freely in the competition this season but are unlikely to find the French club so obliging in defence.

The Cup-winners Cup draw paired Barcelona, the holders, against another Spanish side, Valencia. Barcelona reached the quarter-finals with an 11-2 aggregate victory over Aris Bonnevoie of Luxembourg.

English Cup holders, Arsenal, appeared to have the easiest task in reaching the last four when it was paired with Sweden's Goteborg.

The UEFA Cup draw was dominated by West German clubs, but only two of the five — Kaiserlautern and Bayern Munich — will clash.

The first leg matches in all three competitions will be played on March 5 with the return legs on March 19.

Victorian honored by Saskatchewan

Ron Woolger of Victoria, a former national pistol shooting champion, will be inducted into the Saskatchewan Sports Hall of Fame on March 22 in Regina.

Woolger, a native of Aneroid, Sask., was an eight-time winner of the Saskatchewan indoor and outdoor championships, won the B.C. open title in 1967 and the Canadian closed championship the following year.

While serving as a member of the RCMP, Woolger captured the Canadian police combat championship in 1968, 1970 and 1971 and coached a Saskatchewan team to the open title from 1968 to 1971.

Woolger has been a resident of Victoria since 1976 and retired from the RCMP in 1978.

Volleyball champ returns

For the first time, a defending champion will have a chance win the men's team title for the second successive year when the sixth annual University of Victoria international volleyball tournament is held this weekend.

That's because it's the first time in the six years that defending champs have returned to try their luck again. In each of the other years, the winners were not only out-of-towners but were from out of the country, too! They came from places like Southern California, Brazil and Mexico, which made the trip up to Canada for two years in a row somewhat on the expensive side.

The host UVic Vikings squad has never won the title. In fact, coach Chris Marshall says the best the Vikes have ever done is place fifth when Brazil won two years ago.

There will be 16 teams in the men's division, including the University of Manitoba squad, winner of the title last year are currently regarded as one of the best volleyball teams in Canada. Among other entrants are former national titleholders B.C. Olympics of Vancouver, the University of Alberta from Edmonton, UBC Thunderbirds, Seattle Volleyball Club and Multnomah Athletic Club of Portland, which placed seventh in the U.S. nationals last year.

There are also 16 teams in the women's division including the defending tournament and national champions, Vancouver Old Time Ladies (OTL), Chimo Volleyball Club of Vancouver, which has won several Canadian championships, UBC, University of Washington, and the current Canadian university champion, University of Saskatchewan.

And there will be the UVic Vikettes, coached by Kent Andrews.

Round-robin play will begin for men and women at 4:45 p.m. Friday in both the McKinnon and old UVic gyms. The nearby Mt. Douglas High School gym will also be used to handle the large number of games Saturday, which start at 9 a.m. and run all day with the last ones planned for 9:30 p.m.

The women's final is set for 1:30 p.m. and the men's for 3 Sunday in the McKinnon building.

Before the judge

Trials for eight American fishermen charged during last August's so-called tuna war were pushed back to March from February following an application in Victoria provincial court Wednesday by defence lawyer Robert Higinbotham.

The eight, five from Washington state and the rest from California, had been set for a Feb. 13 trial but Higinbotham was granted a delay until March 19 by Judge Blake Allan. Higinbotham informed the court he was also counsel in a similar case involving 11 more U.S. fisherman set for trial in West Vancouver provincial court March 5.

The Americans are charged with fishing illegally within Canada's self-proclaimed 320-kilometre (200-mile) boundary. The eight, who were arrested and escorted to Victoria by Canadian fisheries officers, were charged Aug. 26 about 90 kilometres off Cape Cook.

Also remanded until Friday for election and possible bail hearing was 44-year-old William Terrence Popp, 1028 Summit.

He was charged with being unlawfully in a dwelling house, assault causing bodily harm, unlawful confinement, and three weapons offences in connection with a Saturday incident in which the Greater Victoria emergency response police squad was called to 1120 Summit.

Loveys, represented by Peter Freeman, elected trial by judge and jury.

Failing to serve the last weekend of a 30-day, intermittent jail term resulted in a nine-day sentence for 26-year-old Barney Jensen, 1641 Oak Bay.

He pleaded guilty to being unlawfully at large from Wilkinson Road jail Dec. 15.

Crown counsel Richard Law told Allan that Jensen was convicted Nov. 2 of driving while under suspension and was given the weekend sentence.

Jensen testified prior to sentencing that his wife was pregnant and was sick that day. He said he did not have a telephone where he lived and decided to stay home with his wife instead. Jensen said he phoned the jail the following Monday to explain.

Allan allowed Jensen to serve the nine days on weekends.

Judge Harold Alder imposed a 14-day jail term after finding a 23-year-old man guilty of driving while under suspension and a seven-day sentence on another 23-year-old who pleaded guilty to driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08.

Robin Anthony Steeves, 323 Skinner, received the 14-day sentence. He was stopped by Victoria police Aug. 6 in the 500-block Craigflower and had been under a suspension by the motor-vehicle branch for accumulation of penalty points.

Richard Roderick Morgan, 118 Menzies, was stopped by Victoria police Aug. 1 after a chase from the 700-block Government to the Mac's Convenient Store parking lot at 235 Menzies shortly before 2 a.m.

Tax concessions asked to get more apartments

By AL FORREST

Canadian Real Estate Association president Eric Charman got a standing ovation from Victoria realtors Wednesday with a call for concessions for apartment construction and an end to the capital gains tax.

Charman, speaking at a luncheon meeting of the Victoria Real Estate Board at The Empress, said many Canadian cities face a critical shortage of apartment space.

The problem will get worse and worse unless federal tax concessions are restored to encourage construction.

He said Canadian apartment construction hit a low point in 1979 with only 60,000 units started, compared with 106,187 in 1971 when special tax write-offs were in effect.

Unless tax benefits are restored, the whole nation will have a housing shortage. This crisis has already hit Victoria, he said, where the vacancy rate is almost nil.

He urged citizens to bring the problem to the attention of politicians running in the Feb. 18 federal election.

A second major problem, he said, is the capital gains tax.

He said he originally favored the idea but now it is clear the tax is on inflation and not profit.

For example, the income tax form in 1973 showed personal exemptions at $1,600. This was indexed for inflation and in 1979 the exemption had been increased to $2,890.

This shows the rate of inflation. It means that if someone bought a building in 1973 for $1.6 million and sold it in 1979 for $2.8 million, there would be no net gain for the investor. The increased value was all due to inflation.

But the federal government would tax the extra $1.2 million under capital gains provisions as though it were a net gain.

Charman said the tax is punative and is hindering business expansion.

"Let business flow," he said.

Charman was president of the local board for three years and was head of the B.C. Real Estate Association before being elected national president.

Charman praised the new mortgage subsidy plan introduced by Premier Bill Bennett.

He said the NDP claims credit for the idea but it should have carried it through while in office.

He also praised Bennett's decision to use credit unions to distribute the subsidized mortgages.

For too long, he said, the eastern banking system had ignored the needs of westerners and it was left to the credit unions to come up with novel ideas like short-term mortgages and graduated payments.

The provincial government plan was for the benefit of British Columbians, using B.C. credit unions, and was worthy of support, he said.

Driver fined

Larry Jeffery Douglas Mutter, 23, was fined $500 Wednesday by county court Judge Peter Millward for driving a car Jan. 28, 1979, in Colwood while his blood-alcohol level was over .08 per cent.

Mutter pleaded guilty mid-way through his trial and the prosecution entered stays of proceedings on two other charges, impaired driving on Jacklin Road and possession of a starting pistol for a purpose dangerous to the public peace.

Hospital expenses to triple mill rate

The mill rate in the Capital Regional District in the next five years will be boosted about 3½ times as debt payments for hospital construction and equipment increase nearly sixfold, the CRD's hospital and health planning commission was told Wednesday night.

Last year's rate of 1.8 mills will peak at 7.2 mills in 1985 and decline steadily after that, assuming no new major capital projects are started and that the tax base rises by about five per cent annually, CRD treasurer Ken Ball said.

Main cause of the increase is $132 million in hospital capital debt which will be incurred by 1984.

The total debt was $33 million at the end of 1979. In succeeding years another $104 million will be spent. This includes $43 million on the new Helmcken Road hospital, on which $5 million has already been spent, and $45 million on extensive renovations at Royal Jubilee Hospital.

Another $11 million will be spent on Victoria General Hospital to modify it for a role in non-acute health care when the Helmcken Road hospital opens.

The provincial government will pay about 60 per cent of the costs, the remainder being levied on the region's taxpayers.

Ball, whose calculations go all the way to 2005, based them on a five per cent annual increase in taxable assessments which is indicative of the past 25 years, although the increase has been higher in recent years, he said.

Quarter-mill funds used for hospital equipment and a special $780,000 repayment to the government to cover overpayment by the province in the past are also included in the debt payments.

Sunshine Coast to ask Hydro probe

By JAKE BANKY

Although Energy Minister Bob McClelland has already shot down the idea, the Sunshine Coast Regional District Board is expected to support a call for a royal commission inquiry into the Cheekeye-Dunsmuir hydro transmission line.

A resolution demanding a royal commission probe into all aspects of the proposed power line controversy by a commissioner with expert status in energy economics goes before the board tonight.

It also demands a six-month moratorium on construction of the 500-kilovolt line to Vancouver Island.

The resolution is expected to pass without difficulty.

McClelland has already stated: "There won't be any royal commission."

He said the decision to go ahead with the project was made a long time ago and has been fully justified.

Environment Minister Stephen Rogers will hold a public hearing in Pender Harbor Jan. 22 on the route to be followed by the Cheekeye-Dunsmuir line.

However Sunshine Coast residents are expected to insist on debating the justification for the line.

Sources say if the minister insists on limiting discussion only to questions of routing, he can expect a walkout from his meeting.

Opponents of the project have had their argument reinforced by the leak of a B.C. Hydro internal memo questioning the need to build the line.

That memo, written by building programs manager William Burton, also criticizes Hydro for concealing the true cost of the line. He says a figure of $315 million is still being used when, in fact, it will cost around $1 billion.

"I don't put any credence in that at all," was McClelland's response to Burton's memo.

But now it appears Burton has some high-level backing, at least for his contention regarding the cost of the project.

Another leaked internal memo, this one written by Hydro vice-president Charles Nash, states: "The fact that the cost of the project will be double or more than the $315 million originally quoted is well known . . ."

Former fireman Fred Kelley says he feels like the Tin Man from the Wizard of Oz as he heads out to California to await a heart transplant. Kelley, 39, whose diseased heart apparently is growing steadily worse, left his Framingham, Mass. home with his son for a cross-country drive to Stanford University Medical Centre. Last October, doctors there rejected his bid for a heart transplant, claiming his heart wasn't diseased enough at 25 per cent of capacity. "They won't perform a transplant until my condition reaches about 15 per cent capacity," Kelley said, "and since the doctors at Massachusetts General Hospital expect it to decrease, they thought I should be in California." He said he had a CB radio installed in his van in case he becomes ill on the trip and needs help. "My handle is the Tin Man," he said, "and I'm looking for a heart."

Robert Young, television's Marcus Welby, has cited the implantation of intraocular lenses in his own eyes as evidence the devices can help some cataract patients. But the 72-year-old actor, whose lenses were implanted three years ago, refrained from making sweeping recommendations to a U.S. Food and Drug Administration committee in Washington reviewing the safety and effectiveness of the devices. He said it would be presumptuous to do so. Young said he was aware of all the problems associated with the lenses but they have made such a difference that the risks for him were worth it.

Dear Abby:

My husband (I'll call him Joe) and I live in the same house but have separate bedrooms because I've known for years that Joe can't leave other women alone. I got tired of fighting with him about it, so I just gave up. In fact, I don't even care anymore.

I'm staying with him until our daughter grows up. Barbara is 11, and Joe is a very good provider.

A few weeks ago Joe went to Colorado to visit his brother, Frank, and he took Barbara along. When they came home Barbara told me that after Uncle Frank went to work, Daddy and Aunt Jennie would lock themselves in the bedroom for a long time. She said Daddy told her not to tell anyone.

Abby, should I let this go or make a stink? After all, Jennie isn't just another woman. She's his brother's wife!

Names Changed

Dear Changed:

What's to be gained by making a stink? Your husband would probably turn on Barbara for turning him in.

Since your daughter is being exposed to some raunchy behavior on the part of married folks, be sure she understands that not all married men behave like Daddy, nor do all married women carry on like Aunt Jennie.

Dear Abby:

My old lady and I are having an argument and hope you can settle it.

I say pigeons are still being trained to carry messages, and the wife says that pigeons haven't carried anything but diseases since the Civil War.

Who is right?

Andy

Dear Andy:

You are. Pigeons are still being trained to carry messages.

Dear Abby:

What is a mother supposed to say when her child asks, "Can Kevin stay for supper?" — and Kevin is standing right there looking up into your face?

I always say, "Of course, but Kevin has to call his mother and get her permission first."

Then my brat says, "Mother, you call Kevin's mother. He's afraid to."

So, like a ninny, I call Kevin's mother, and she says, "Are you sure he'll be no trouble?" Then what am I supposed to say? Anyway, I think you have the picture.

Conned

Dear Conned:

Your resentment at being outsmarted by a couple of junior con artists is understandable, but you're lucky your son has friends. Simply instruct him to ask you privately if he may have a guest for supper.

Clinic soothes skin and souls

By LON WOOD

The mirrored chamber resembles a science fiction time machine — or futuristic prop from Star Wars.

There are clicks, buzzes, a whirring fan — and lots of flashing light. But the person inside doesn't go anywhere — except, perhaps, away from the discomfort and emotional hurt of a hereditary skin disorder that has dogged humanity since the dawn of mankind.

Psoriasis. In ancient times a term applied indiscriminately to many skin diseases — some serious and transmissable. The afflicted were ostracized; forced to have ringers of warning bells walk ahead of them, and to wander homelessly as beggars.

Like lepers, their very appearance was considered unclean. Leprosy and psoriasis were not clearly differentiated.

On top of their troubles, some of the outcasts suffered terrible itching — which may explain why the disease was called psoriasis; derived from the Greek psora, meaning itch.

Today the term labels a specific skin disease which is not contagious and is very common. In Canada and the U.S. nearly eight million people have it.

Both psoriatics and the non-afflicted can now be assured that psoriasis, with modern treatment, can often be brought under control, despite there being no known cure.

The chamber plays a big part in psoriasis control and is tucked away in the Victoria General Hospital Annex at the corner of Quadra and Fairfield streets.

The entire upper floor of the annex is home of the VGH Psoriasis Day Care Clinic — one of only two such clinics in B.C. and part of a slim network of clinics strung across the nation.

The clinic is co-ordinated by Phyllis Patterson, a registered nurse assisted by another RN, Shirley Griffiths, on an eight-hour daily basis Monday through Friday under the direction of dermatologist Dr. H.J. Lewis. Its inception and continued service is rooted in the caring co-operation of medical professionals, VGH auxiliary and psoriatics themselves.

"The light unit came about July 17, 1978," Patterson said in an interview Wednesday. "It started out just as a nucleus for a clinic which we patterned to a degree after the Shaughnessy Hospital clinic in Vancouver.

"To date, we've had 167 patients aged 15 through 75. Each person comes three to five weeks, depending on the severity of their psoriasis and their rate of response. A few have stayed up to 10 weeks — and for everyone, that's eight hours a day."

After referral by a skin specialist, or general practitioner for a person in a remote area of Vancouver Island, there is a waiting list of three to five weeks before a person enters the clinic as an outpatient to begin the all-day applications of steroid creams, petroleum distillate tars, anthralin paste, shampoos, cleansers and special bath oils all interspersed with calculated exposures to artificial sunlight (ultraviolet).

Baths and ointments remove the whitish, adherent scales of psoriasis from their reddened base, and promote healing. The ultraviolet light treatment retards growth of psoriatic skin, which is four to five times as thick as normal epidermis because of accelerated reproduction of epidermal cells. It normally takes about 28 days for a cell to travel from the bottom of the epidermis to the top, but the process takes only three or four days in psoriatic epidermis — hence the buildup of scales.

Booking time at the clinic, however, isn't quite as simple as making a dental appointment.

People who hold down jobs during the clinic's eight-to-four day are out of luck if they cannot take time out for treatment. Those coming from around the Island are faced with living costs averaging $1,000 per treatment if they lack friends or family to board with while in Victoria.

"Unless they have a medical plan or vacation leave — it is not easy," says Patterson. "We've had people who start out but can't keep up the schedule. Retired people have an advantage with not working, though for some the money can be a hardship.

"Cost of treatment is $5 per day which is not covered by provincial medical plans since psoriasis is not considered to be disabling. Mind you, we know it is a disabling disease — particularly when people have it on hands and feet."

Actual cost per day of treatment is upwards of $30 per person, borne by the hospital auxiliary, currently led by Peggy Murray.

Tuesday this week the auxiliary handed over $15,000 for clinic operation, bringing to $50,000 the total raised and donated in less than two years.

"It's all done through bazaars, lottery tickets, selling flowers in the hospital lobby, a goody cart that goes around to the patients — it's awfully hard in nickles and dimes, but we have a hard-working group. One woman is coming up 90 this March," says Murray.

"This started as our baby," she said. "A desperate situation existed in the lack of treatment available for psoriasis patients in Greater Victoria and on the Island — but it was not really known at the time how great was the need and how many psoriasis sufferers there are."

Both Murray and Patterson said unless demand grows for the government to take it over, the clinic could fold.

Latest estimates show $140,000 will be needed to continue operation of the clinic until the hospital moves to its new Helmcken Road site in March, 1982. The auxiliary estimates it can provide a further $20,000 by that time — making a total of $70,000.

"The shortfall of $70,000 must be obtained from interested service clubs or government agencies," said Murray.

Dr. Lewis estimates there are seven to ten thousand psoriatics on Vancouver Island and that "if we could get them all together, with their friends and relatives, we'd have some 60,000 people who could help us."

But of these psoriatics, said Patterson, only about two per cent seek treatment at present, "mostly because elbows and knees can be covered up, and because a lot of people just can't afford those practical considerations though they suffer in every other respect."

Lewis, Murray and Patterson all agree the clinic's support problems are compounded even if only slightly by the attitude some Island doctors.

"They don't even tell their patients!" exclaims an outraged Murray. "And we're the only one on the Island!"

Both Lewis and Patterson agree there is an attitude of "We can do it better" in the minds of some.

But if clinic workers display little concern for grudging professional recognition of their physical successes, it is because they are swept away by the social value the clinic has established.

"As far as I'm concerned its the most important aspect," says Patterson. "Physically they get treatment, but emotionally they get equally as much. (See A psoriatic speaks, page 22.)

"Down here we start with some pamphlets: What you have to bring, the outline of the day, three other short, to-the-point pamphlets on psoriasis.

"At the moment we have no psychologist, but Dr. Lewis and I go over the patients; talk about what progress is made, what changes should be made in their ointments. On the third week of treatment he comes in and gives a talk to each. We try to do a lot of counselling."

Lewis starts the first five minutes of each individual session much the same. Then the talk varies.

"Often I have to smash some of their peculiar ideas about the disease they have," he said during an interview in his clinic office. "A lot of people have been told nothing can be done, while 95 per cent are responding to control at our clinic. . .

"I'm merely here as a catalyst — the patients get together and help themselves. Some have come here introverted and left as extroverts."

The lapse rate of the condition is as individual as the response that clears it up, said Lewis, who added that until more is known about the mysteries of psoriasis, there are countless projects to work on such as education of spouses and the public, working towards a 24-hour clinic and clinic facilities for children; facilities for out-of-towners to stay — "not to mention research."

Persistent noise is constant misery

By DR. L. L. COLEMAN

I've had noises in my head for 15 years. You once wrote about a machine that can alleviate this noise. I lost that column.

Mrs. H.H.

Dear Mrs. H.:

Only those who have suffered from head noises, or "tinnitus," can appreciate the misery of this persistent and insistent, bothersome condition. Noises in the head may sound like whistling sirens, like the roar of the ocean, like buzzing, or like the escape of steam from a radiator.

Sometimes the noise is continuous. Other forms of tinnitus are interrupted and consistent with the beat of the heart or pulse.

The major complaint is that the noise is constantly present, especially when one is in a quiet room. Many people will say that "the noise wakes me up at night." In reality, it is the quiet of night that exaggerates the noise in the head.

Tinnitus has many causes. Occasional blockage of the ear after a flight, or infection of the ear may produce it. These conditions are usually temporary and the tinnitus disappears when the problem does. Tinnitus has also been attributed to some drugs. Large quantities of aspirin, and quinnine, are two major offenders. Allergies rarely produce long-term tinnitus.

By far, the most common causes of tinnitus are vascular ones. Narrowing of the blood vessels by arteriosclerosis and high blood pressure are frequent offenders. There are other causes, too. Many complicated tests have been devised in an effort to pinpoint inner ear disturbances and neurological problems that may be responsible for tinnitus.

Members of the "tinnitus club" will say that the noise is lessened in the inside of their skulls when they listen to music, hear the radio or are in a noisy place. This effect is known as "masking." Because of this finding, a number of masking instruments have been manufactured. Those who manufacture and sell them, unfortunately, are far more enthusiastic than the majority of people who have bought them. I cannot possibly understand why a tiny noisemaker should cost from $300 to $500. I suggest that anyone who decides to buy one arrange with the dealer to use it on a trial basis for a month. If it works, fine. Then, perhaps, the unconscionable cost may be justified. If it doesn't work, return it.

The American Tinnitus Foundation, Post Office Box 5, in Portland, Ore., is a scientific organization manned by prestigious ear doctors, neurologists and psychologists. They have a vast amount of interesting and informative booklets that can help those who are tortured by tinnitus.

Clinic's audio-visual presentation gives facts on psoriasis to outpatients

Life of the psoriatic not just appearances

By LON WOOD

Meeting Laura you could easily take her for a stewardess — her expression is crisp and confident; that touch of Hollywood sexiness that comes with makeup.

She dresses impecably, is cheery and outgoing. At least today — there are still some down moments.

Her opening remarks are startling, if one is impressed by appearance:

"Last year, I wore a dress for the first time in 16 years — and much of that time I sat in the house for weeks on end without going out because it bothered me so much."

The "it" Laura refers to is the psoriasis (pronounced sore-EYE—asis) she contracted in her mid teens and had suffered alone with she becoming an outpatient at Victoria General Hospital's Psoriasis Day Care Clinic when it opened two years ago.

Since then she has taken treatment five times and vows to spend the time and money as often as she has to to neutralize the physical and psychological effects of the disease.

"The last time I came in I was as close to breaking down as I ever want to be," she told The Time this week. "I was so sore. They took one look and said 'It's okay. Have a good cry and we'll get started.' I went into a quiet room alone, had a cry, and got emotionally ready to go at it again."

Laura says the clinic has been a Godsend to her.

"Yes, there are times when I did feel like making the proverbial jump off the bridge — but now that I have somewhere to go I'm just ecstatic about the place. You'll hear this over and over again, from anyone who has been there."

Psoriasis can be pustular and painful and in the case of the rare von Zumbusch form, hundreds of pustules coalescing into lakes of pus bring on high fever and prostration and sometimes death.

But even severe cases of pustular psoriasis may go into remission.

Psoriasis often involves the nails, pitting them as if by an icepick. In a variation producing onycholysis, it separates the nails and lifts them from the nail bed with heaped up debris.

Although psoriasis generally tends to localize on the extensor surfaces (elbows, knees) the flexor surfaces are favored in some patients — particularly where moisture, heat and friction are great, such as in the folds of the groins, the cleft between the buttocks and the genitals.

"You can imagine chapped lips — or sunburn," says Malcolm, 24, who has has psoriasis since infancy. "That's the feeling over at least a third of my body, all the time. And if it isn't sore, it's itchy. I get up in the night sometimes and scratch. Mostly my legs. Sometimes it doesn't stop 'til the skin bleeds — and everything, everything is covered in what I call 'snow'."

Malcolm has responded well to treatment at the clinic and has become less self-conscious at swimming pools and in the summer, when he now wears short sleeves instead of long to hide his once-blotchy and scaly arms.

Laura still finds some aspects of fashion difficult. "You can never wear your hair the way you like," she said. "And I wear light clothing most of the time, because of the flakes."

She still likes to sit summers in her own back yard, which is surrounded by a high fence.

"Of course the kids bring kids by and they say, 'Ohhhhhh! What's that!', and I say, 'Oh, just a rash . . .'"

The structure and atmosphere of the clinic is much like the inside of many of the other homes in the Fairfield district — larger, older but well-kept.

There are many rooms — all freshly painted white with bright blue trim and matching flower-patterned curtains.

There's a small room with a telephone and bed for patients who want quiet alone or to do business.

The living room has six or eight patients sitting around in constant conversation, reading or using the color television set for diversion.

"There's perhaps one or two I've met who still have a chip on their shoulder or something, but the rest have been so nice to talk to. We get things off our chest."

Both Laura and Malcolm said they are fortunate to have extremely understanding spouses, which they said is not always the case.

"There have been three or so people here whose marriages have broken up because of psoriasis — or at least because it compounded their other problems," said Laura.

Popping in and out of the clinic from time to time is Dave Fitzgerald, senior instructor of the fleet school at CFB Naden.

He is president of the Vancouver Island Psoriasis Society which now has 50 members "with more coming every week."

"Our number one aim is financial support — education of the public; moral support and counselling, and eventually, a research project," says Fitzgerald.

Annual membership is $7. Information on society projects and meeting dates can be obtained by telephoning Fitzgerald at 477-9413 or the clinic at 388-7931.

"The clinic here could get a lot bigger," said Fitzgerald.

Skin show is free

A 20-minute narrated slide presentation titled Psoriasis may be arranged for group showings in the Victoria area by contacting the Vancouver Island Psoriasis Society or the VGH Psoriasis Day Care Clinic through telephone numbers published in the article below.

ANGER: It's all leg

By JAMES YENCKEL
The Washington Post

A young man brought up in a strongly religious family had been admonished by his parents never to display anger. Nor, they told him, should he express any negative feelings about them. To do so would go against their church's teachings.

Their objective may have been to raise a properly mannered child who honors his mother and father, and they did so, but along the way they laid the groundwork for personal problems that were to plague him in adult life.

As a child he had quickly learned that to speak out at home about something that angered him brought catastrophe down on his head. By the time he grew up, it's not surprising he had become fearful of asserting himself.

This disability — and it definitely is one — paralyzed his career, and despite a good education, he was able to work only at menial tasks.

This young man, who eventually sought help from a local mental health centre, is part of a large percentage of North Americans whose lives are complicated because they're afraid to let someone know they're mad at them — whether it's the spouse, the children, the parents, the boss or the plumber.

"Probably 50 per cent of the people I see come into therapy because of a difficulty in expressing anger," says Bob Maxwell, therapist at the Springfield Outpatient Unit of the Mount Vernon Centre for Community Health in Fairfax County, Va. Maxwell and fellow therapist Toni Ann Sciullo recently led a discussion on What Can I Do When I Get Mad? as a part of the centre's continuing series of educational lectures.

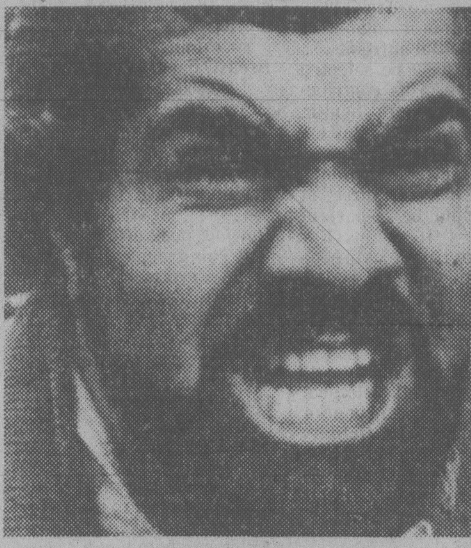
Anger is a human emotion that one should not be afraid of expressing, Maxwell and Sciullo tell their clients — not, of course, in the sudden, sometimes violent explosion that comes from a long-time bottled-up rage but in appropriate methods that also can be learned.

"If a child is forbidden to show his feelings — bad as well as good — its going to effect his concept of self and his ability to relate to others," says Maxwell.

The numbers of these people, he says, "are legion. They lead productive lives, but not as rich and joyous lives as possible."

Often, he says, people adopt a "nice guy" pose to avoid speaking up. "There's no such thing as a perpetually nice guy. Given the normal problems we all experience, in the best of relationships there are bound to be irritating, upsetting occasions."

In a marriage, the relationship suffers if these irritations are not aired, he says. "If I taught people how to love, I would teach them first how to be angry. No genuine relationship exists that doesn't include irritation at one another."



Nice guys are hiding it

When he and his wife were first married, Maxwell says, people considered them the "ideal couple." But "we were just scared to death to be angry" at one another. When they began learning to bring their anger into the open they grew "a heck of a lot closer."

People who keep their anger inside often are afraid that speaking out may harm their marriage, sour a friendship or cost them their job. "There is a risk," acknowledges Maxwell, "I don't deny that. There is a risk everytime we express ourselves honestly."

But failure to communicate — in a marriage, for example — can lead to "a slow deterioration of the relationship" in which the spontaneity is gone. The couple, he says, may go from simple toleration to unproductive arguing to divorce. That's not to say all arguing is bad. To the contrary, says Maxwell, "a couple that quarrels is apt to be healthy — presuming they're quarreling in a nondestructive way."

Another aspect of the problem is that people often don't recognize their anger. Sciullo cites the case of a husband who came home from the office to complain about the one task his wife had failed to complete that day, ignoring all those she had managed to finish.

Instead of getting justifiably angry at her spouse, says Sciullo, the wife felt guilty, blaming herself for what she perceived to be an inadequacy. Not until one recognizes one's anger, she says, does one have the choice of doing something effective about it.

How should one express anger? Certainly not by "ranting and raving. That rarely solves anything," says Maxwell.

At their recent lecture that drew 20 people, young and old, Maxwell and Sciullo advocated the use of direct "I" statements. If, for example, a friend is nervously kicking your chair and it bothers you, don't say: "Bill, will you knock it off." That puts Bill on the defensive, says Maxwell.

Instead, turn the focus on yourself and say calmly: "Bill, I find it irritating." In that situation, says Sciullo, "You take responsibility for your own feelings." Also you probably will be effective and the kicking will stop.

For practice, "before biting off a major conflict with a spouse," says Maxwell, their clienta are urged to chance "a non-threatening confrontation" with a grocer or a neighbor — "someone with whom he has a minor problem."

"Expression of anger does not mean loss of control," says Maxwell, "but a lot os us picked up that message when we were younger."

Maxwell and Sciullo offer a final suggestion. Though it's most effective to verbalize your anger, sometimes the situation doesn't permit if and you might be better off "punching your pillow," jogging or washing the kitchen floor until a more appropriate time for speaking up.

Ray of hope for infertile

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A technique using a laser beam instead of a knife to open blocked Fallopian tubes may offer hope to infertile women who want to have babies, doctors told an international gynecological group here.

"It's still experimental, but it shows tremendous promise," said Dr. Joseph Bellina, head of the Laser Research Institute in New Orleans. He was one of several doctors who presented papers on the procedure to the International Congress of Gynecological Laser Surgery.

Bellina, speaking prior to the formal presentation, said he had used the technique 15 times and that doctors from France and West Germany had used it experimentally on about 50 others.

Although there have been too few operations for conclusive evidence, he said about 80 per cent had "positive biological tests" — they had babies.

"They're getting pregnant and carrying to term — and that's an end point you can't question," he said.

The Fallopian tubes, which carry eggs from the ovaries into the womb, conventionally are unblocked through microsurgery, using small needles and sutures thinner than human hair. Two studies done in 1978 found microsurgery had a 60-per-cent success rate.

One reason lasers work so well is that even the finest scalpel leaves behind more damaged cells than does a laser.

HANDY HOUSEHOLD HINTS... don't overcrowd the refrigerator. It operates more efficiently when it isn't overcrowded. There must be room for air circulation inside—otherwise the compressor has to work too hard to keep the right temperature. SAVE ENERGY AND FLAVOUR WHEN COOKING... to save energy, vitamins and flavour, use only a small amount of water when cooking any vegetable. Pritikin diet strict nutrition matters

dr. elizabeth bright-see
and jane hope

Most people go on diets to lose weight. But others are on special diet regimes because of a medical problem such as kidney or gall bladder disorders, hypertension, high blood pressure or diabetes. More and more North Americans are on controlled diets because of our No. 1 killer, heart disease. These people on strict regimes are either at risk of having a heart attack or have actually had one. They've been told to start watching what they eat — and to start exercising!

Combining sensible eating with sensible exercise as a winning combination isn't a new idea. But the concept has been taken a giant step further by Nathan Pritikin, founder and director of the Longevity Centre in Santa Barbara, California. His program has created quite a flurry of interest among health professionals and the media.

We know that heart disease is a killer. We know the value of exercise for heart attack victims. We also know how important it is for those at risk to cut down on high-fat foods, to increase consumption of whole grains, to reduce alcohol consumption and so on. But Pritikin has those who attend his clinic (or read his books) on a diet that makes these fairly strict guidelines, as outlined in Canada's Report by the Committee on Diet and Cardiovascular Disease, look like a Roman orgy!

His regime is basically quite simple. There are eight high fibre, high-carbohydrate, low-fat, low-protein, low-cholesterol meals served daily coupled with four or five strenuous walks. He has his clients (most of whom have suffered a heart attack or at the very least are potential victims) follow this regime daily.

8:a.m.

Whole grain cereal (cracked wheat, rolled oats) served with skim milk and raw fruit.

9:15a.m.

One serving of citrus fruit (grapefruit, oranges).

10:30a.m.

Soup (gazpacho, potato-leek, tomato-rice).

11:30a.m.

Vegetable salad (cabbage, romaine lettuce, lettuce, green pepper, tomato).

Lemon juice dressing.

12:00Noon

Soup (as above)

1:15p.m.

Baked potato served with mock sour cream and dry cottage cheese curds.

3:30p.m.

Soup (as above)

6:00p.m.

Choice of entree such as lasagna made from whole wheat pasta and skim milk cheese or Chinese-style vegetables with brown rice and one ounce of chicken.

8:15p.m.

Choice of a fresh fruit salad, fresh berries, an apple or grapefruit.

There's no alcohol allowed (on the maintenance program about an ounce of wine a day is allowed). Soda water with lime is one beverage and ghastly tasting Linden tea the other. No regular tea or coffee. Also, smoking is frowned upon!

His diet adds up to about 600 calories a day. That low energy intake combined with the strenuous walks for energy output ensures that, as a side effect, most people lose weight, usually about a half-pound a day. But the majority of people go because they believe, like Pritikin, that this diet-exercise program could possibly add years to their lives.

There are numerous "sucess stories" since the clinic opened in 1976. However, the Pritikin program comes under attack by some health professionals. We'll go into the pros and cons of his program next week.

Activity on its own is a reducer

By Dr. JEAN MAYER
Dr. JOHANNA DWYER
(Third of a series)

Cutting down on calories is not the only way to lose weight. Exercise will do it, too. By stepping up your daily activity you can lose at a steady one-or-two pounds-a-week rate without giving up much food.

Its a myth that exercise burns up so few calories that it is not worth considering as a means of weight control. This myth is very appealing from the vantage point of a soft armchair before the fire. But it's simply not true.

Standing up takes a few more calories than sitting there. Walking through the door takes a few more. In fact, if you keep walking at a brisk rate for an hour you would use 300 to 400 calories. By the end of a week, you would have burned off 2,100 to 2,800 calories, without cutting your food intake by one iota.

There is another myth that says you must exercise all at once if physical activity is to be diet-effective. Don't believe that either. It's not necessary to split wood for five hours a day in order to burn off 3,500 calories. For just as you put pounds on an ounce at a time, you can take them off — slowly but surely — with a little extra exercise each day. Building as much extra activity into your daily routine as possible will make dieting that much easier and that much faster.

Try to walk for at least an hour each day. Ignore elevators for the stairs when you're going up or down four flights or less. Bicycle to work or shopping instead of taking the car.

If you aren't already doing it, engage in an active year-round sport, like swimming or tennis. Have all your extension phones taken out and run to answer the one you have left.

An important added benefit is the effect of exercise on weight maintenance. Normal people have a complex and finely-tuned internal appetite-and-satiety mechanism that works very well as long as they maintain a certain level of physical activity. (This does not appear to be true of the really obese, however.)

Generally, this appetite-satiety mechanism will automatically regulate your desire for food to match your body's needs so long as you are a reasonably active person. But the mechanism breaks down when your level of physical activity falls too low. You'll then find yourself eating more than your body needs — and added weight will begin to build up. That's why people who are sedentary have a constant struggle against putting on weight whereas people who are active seem to always be more fit.

Just as any diet should be chosen with an eye to obtaining an optimum amount of all the essential nutrients, so should exercise be selected with an eye to its contribution to your general health. There are four kinds of exercise that research has shown bring their own specific benefits, and three, at least, should be a part of everyone's lifestyle. (For the following examples we've added caloric expenditure for a 150-pound man. Smaller people would use fewer, larger ones more.)

1) This first category of exercise involves sustained, moderate activity an hour or so each day. Such activity increases the amount of oxygen taken in and stimulates blood circulation. It also helps keep weight down.

Walking:
5 km/h	250 calories per hour
7 km/h	350
Golf (without a cart)	300
Dancing	200-400

2) This category involves more vigorous exercise, also for an hour or so each day. The following exercise helps lower blood pressure, if it is up. If it's already low, it will keep it there. These exercises also help keep weight down.

Swimming:
Breast, backstroke	300-500 calories per hour
Crawl	700-900
Tennis	400-500
Rowing:
Canoeing, 7 km/h	420
Sculling, 50 str./min.	420
97 str./min.	670
Rowing, peak effort	1,200

3) This group calls for vigorous exercise, three or four times a week, for at least 20 minutes. These help keep blood vessels elastic and build peripheral circulation around the heart.

Running	300 cal./20 min.
Soccer	250
Squash	180
Gymnastics	160

4) Finally, there is really hard, sustained exercise for several hours ever day, which can help lower serum cholesterol or keep it down even when you're eating a diet high in saturated fat.

Very few Canadians are able to attain this last level of daily activity, so we must rely on a diet low in total fat and cholesterol, and replacement of some saturated fat with polyunsaturated oils.

You can make a fine lemon mousse by using lemon cheese straight from the jar. Besides ½ cup of lemon cheese, you'll need one teaspoon gelatin, 2 teaspoons water, one pouch "whip" topping mix, and ½ cup homogenized milk.

Soften gelatin in water and dissolve over hot water. Stir in lemon cheese. Combine the topping mix, milk, a touch of vanilla, and a dash of salt. Whip until stiff. Fold into lemon cheese mixture and freeze for 3 or 4 hours. Makes 4 servings.

Sugar does not make us fat — at least this is the opinion of three Pittsburgh University teachers of medicine. In a study conducted in 1975, these three men concluded that the stage for obesity seems to be set in early infancy. Some of us are born with more of the storage cells that hold body fat.

Sugar And Obesity is a small folder that examines the factors pertaining to body weight and diets. For a free copy write to: Sugar and Obesity, Consumer Services, Kellogg Salada Company, 6700 Finch Avenue West, Rexdale, Ontario, M9W 5P2.

Corn syrup was first made during the Napoleonic Wars. Napoleon offered a reward to anyone who could discover a means of extracting sugar from locally-grown plants. While a French scientist was able to extract a sugary substance from grapes, it was a scientist in Germany who produced a clear, sweet syrup from starch. This triggered a new interest in producing a corn-based sugar (corn syrup) from corn starch.

If you would like twelve recipes which make use of corn syrup, write to: Consumer Services Department, Best Foods Division, Canada Starch Company, Box 129, Station "A", Montreal, Quebec, H3C 1C5. Ask for the free folder entitled, Cooking With Corn Syrup.

Parties pace platform policies at the Gallup

ELECTION 80

By ROGER SMITH

OTTAWA (CP) — When the last Gallup poll hit the headlines, Prime Minister Clark said the only public opinion poll he plans to comment on is the one scheduled for Feb. 18.

But far from ignoring polls between now and election day, strategists from all three main parties will pore over the results of hundreds of surveys done by the polling gurus they hire to find out what's on the voters' minds.

Behind the public ballyhoo of the election campaign, a private army of poll-takers queries selected samples of voters on everything from what they think about party leaders to which issues worry them most.

And all three parties — despite what their leaders might say — will be watching anxiously for public polls like the Gallup, because on this they agree: Opinion polls have become both a major factor in politics and a crucial tool in winning votes.

Political opinion polls help explain why this election was called in the first place. Public and private polls showing a popularity slump for Clark and his government apparently buoyed the resolve of opposition parties to defeat the budget Dec. 13, precipitating the election.

What shows up on the computer printouts of poll takers affects the pattern of the election campaign. The polls may result in a promise dropped here, a shift in speaking style there, a theme to be hammered into a television commercial or even a decision to abandon an unpopular policy.

For example, opinion polls told the Progressive Conservatives to modify plans to dismantle Petro-Canada because the government oil company was widely favored.

Polls told the Liberals that Pierre Trudeau should wage a low-key campaign lest he trigger poll-proven doubts about his political manner and continued presence.

Surveys told the New Democratic Party to soft-peddle the idea that the election of Joe Clark last May was a blunder because voters resented this a slur on their judgment.

Private polls also have shown that a campaign visit by a party leader has actually caused a slide in support for the local candidate, prompting the leader to bypass sensitive ridings.

Strategists become quiet when talk turns to the cost of the hundreds of professional polls and surveys conducted privately for the political parties, regionally and nationally.

But experts extimate that several hundred thousand dollars will be spent to get up-to-date ideas about what the voters are thinking.

Publicly, Gallup, the CBC and CTV all are producing national polls during the campaign.

Gallup — officially the Canadian Institute of Public Opinion — hopes to have its next party-standing survey for late January and squeeze in another before election day. The CBC, whose polling is conducted by the Carleton University School of Journalism, is to be released Feb. 4.

Political parties tend to react cautiously in public to the published poll results, but concede their importance for good or ill.

"It would be silly to deny their impact on public opinion and certainly on morale" of party workers, says Robin Sears, NDP campaign director.

Two things are certain: Each poll will grab headlines and each headline will fuel the arguments of those who say such polls are too general, too easily misinterpreted and too often outdated. The Gallup sounding released in early January, for example, was based on interviews before the government defeat.

Critics say publication of poll results can influence voters by creating either a bandwagon effect — where undecided voters flock to the leading party — or an underdog effect, where they go to the apparent loser.

Pollsters reply that the problem lies not with the polls but with the way they are reported. Lists of figures and qualifiers are boiled down to he one bit of information — usually who's ahead — that fits a catchy headline and sticks in the public mind.

Gallup research director Clare Hatton says the company's 28 subscribing newspapers know the limits of polling.

"But I still think they might get carried away in writing it up because they re trying to dramatize."

Prof. Alan Frizzell, who heads the Carleton polling program, says polls are simply "a more scientific form of reporting." He says news reports which influence voters are based on a reporter's discussions with five, 10 or perhaps 20 people a day.

"All polls are, if they are careful and cautious and use a strong methodology, is an extension of that, by interviewing 1,000 people instead of 10."

The figure and opinions that count most to the major political parties comes from their own professional pollsters.

Last chance for debate, leaders told

OTTAWA (CP) — The three English language television networks have invited the Progressive Conservatives, Liberals and New Democrats to make one last try at agreeing on a leaders' television debate.

A spokesman for CBC, CTV and Global said Wednesday night a meeting has been called for 2 p.m. Friday in Toronto to see if agreement can be reached.

"This is it," said Marg Anthony of CTV from Toronto. "The time limit is up.

"If we can't get an agreement by Friday there will be no more time to prepare for it (the debate)."

She made the statement after representatives of the three networks met to consider a proposal by Liberal Leader Pierre Trudeau for a debate among him, Prime Minister Clark and NDP Leader Ed Broadbent with no reporters involved.

Trudeau said in Saskatoon Tuesday that he would debate Clark at any time and anywhere but he does not want journalists to be involved, as they were in the leaders' debate of the May 22 election campaign.

He said he wants a real debate between leaders "head to head, one on one."

Trudeau said in the debate during the May 22 election campaign reporters "seemed to be spending most of their time taking Mr. Clark off the ropes." However, a study of the transcript of that debate presents a slightly different picture.

A transcript of the May 13 debate that Trudeau objects to shows that moderator David Johnston played a more active role in the exchanges between the party leaders than any of the three journalists present.

Johnston's primary role was to shift the topic of debate to new areas. But he also intervened on several occasions to allow one of the leaders a chance to reply to the points raised by another.

On two occasions, Trudeau asked for and received time to reply to points made by NDP Leader Ed Broadbent.

The only real exchange between a journalist and a leader came when a reporter pressed Trudeau on his statement that it was "almost treasonable" for anyone not to consider national unity a key issue in the campaign.

Tax policy leapfrogs Clark

SOUTHEY, Sask. (CP) — Prime Minister Clark was caught by surprise by statements from fellow Progressive Conservatives twice this week.

When Tim Ralfe, a Tory media co-ordinator, told a questioning reporter Tuesday about the Conservative mortgage tax credit plans, he got front page play in several Wednesday morning newspapers.

Clark didn't know about the interview in which Ralfe said a Tory government reelected Feb. 18 would make maximum benefits of $750 initially available under a scheme that would be shortened to three years from four.

"We don't know everything that's going on," Jock Osler, Clark's press secretary said in an interview Wednesday. "Mr. Clark's on the plane."

Osler said he was unable to say if Ralfe's statement was official party policy.

While campaigning in southern Ontario Tuesday Clark was greeted by front page stories which indicated Finance Minister John Crosbie, interviewed Monday, may be talking about the need to increase oil prices because of increases in world prices.

Clark responded to questions about the story by saying the Conservatives would not increase prices this year more than the $4 a barrel already proposed.

Meanwhile, in Winnipeg, Ed Broadbemt reiterated that a New Democratic Party government would establish a made-in-Canada merchant marine with a revitalized shipbuilding industry to put more Canadians to work.

The NDP leader announced his shipbuilding proposals in Lauzon, Que., following a tour of the Davie Shipyards and a brief meeting with company and union officials.

And in Saskatoon, Liberal Leader Pierre Trudeau attacked the Progressive Conservative government saying it is so obsessed with energy self-sufficiency it has neglected the short-term problem of securing supplies of imported oil.

Trudeau said a Liberal government would raise oil prices, but he still won't say by how much.

The Liberal leader told reporters the Conservatives have ignored potential contracts with Venezuela and Mexico to supply imported oil used in Eastern Canada. The previous Liberal government was negotiating with both countries.

"The Tories let both these things go in their obsession with self-sufficiency for Canada sometime in 1980 or 1990 or 1995."

Hopefully, Canada will reach that goal and will have enough of its own oil, he said.

"But for a period, we won't have enough in Canada and for that period it's important to ensure security of supply from reliable markets like Venezuela, like Mexico."

Opening lead — king of diamonds.

Counting out a hand sounds difficult, but the fact is that the process is fairly easy and anyone who can count to 13 can meet the challenge. Assume you're in six notrump and West leads the king of diamonds. When dummy appears you see eleven sure tricks, and your problem is to find a twelfth trick.

For practical purposes, the only suit where you can gain a trick is in spades. Here you have a good chance to make four tricks instead of only three.

Scoring a fourth spade trick may appear to be only a matter of finding the suit divided 3-3 or catching the singleton or doubleton jack, but actually there's much more to it than that. To begin with, you should duck the king of diamonds in order to learn all you possibly can about the distribution of the adverse cards.

Let's say West continues with the queen of diamonds, on which East discards a heart. The wisdom of losing the previous trick immediately becomes apparent because you quickly learn that West started with five diamonds and East with one.

You win the diamond queen with the ace and explore the East-West distribution still further by cashing three hearts and four clubs — in the course of which you learn that West started with three hearts and three clubs, as well as five diamonds.

With eleven of West's thirteen cards now accounted for in three suits, it has become mathematically impossible for him to have started with more than two spades. Accordingly, you lead a low spade your ace, a low spade back to the king, and then dummy's last spade. When East produces the nine you finesse the ten — with absolute certainty that the ten will win the trick.

Rebel germs bred to fight virus

BOSTON (AP) — Bacteria have been programmed to produce interferon, a rare drug that can cure viral infections, including the common cold, scientists said Wednesday.

They said the drug also is being tested against cancer.

The scientists used techniques of recombinant DNA engineering to insert a human gene into the genetic material of a common bacterium.

The result is a strain of bacteria that produces interferon, the body's natural first line of defence against viral infections.

"We regard this as a very significant advance in what has been accomplished in recombinant DNA technology," said Harvard biologist Walter Gilbert. Gilbert is chairman of Biogen, a new company which financed the experiments.

The research, announced at a news conference in Boston, was directed by Dr. Charles Weissmann at the University of Zurich.

Weissmann said his research team spliced a human gene that directs production of interferon into the genetic structure of escherichia coli, a common bacterium found in the human intestine.

Currently, each bacterium produces about two molecules of interferon. But Gilbert said researchers should be able to refine the bacteria so they will produce at least 1,000 times that amount.

"We hope to get useful amounts within a year," he said.

Gilbert said the bacteria-produced interferon appears very similar to its human counterpart and was able to protect human cells growing in tissue culture against invasion by viruses.

He said researchers hope within a year to test the substance on humans.

In previous tests, doctors have found that human-produced interferon will fight hepatitis, herpes virus infection of the eye, and rubella virus infection in the newborn. A nasal spray made with the substance even appears to combat the common cold.

At Stanford University, researchers found that prolonged use of interferon caused tumors to shrink in three patients who were suffering from lymphoma, a cancer of the lymph system.

Last June, Gilbert led a research team at Harvard that used recombinant DNA to harness bacteria to make a form of insulin.

Other groups have also induced bacteria to make insulin and two other useful human hormones — somatostatin and human growth hormone. None of these has yet reached the marketplace as a usable human drug, although insulin produced by a San Francisco firm, Genentech Inc., for the Eli Lilly drug firm is expected to be on the market within a year.

Cigarette just puffed wheat?

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A new non-tobacco cigarette made of puffed wheat, cocoa bean husks, citrus and molasses went on the market in the United States this week with the blessings of a medical expert who says it may help curb heart disease.

"There are 50 million smokers in this country, and we can certainly help a lot of them quit or greatly reduce their consumption of cigarettes," said Lee Danna, board chairman of the manufacturer, International Brands Inc. of suburban Los Altos.

The new smokes — reported to be the first mass-marketed mass-produced non-tobacco cigarettes — do not carry the surgeon-general's health warning because they contain no tobacco. Nor are they subject to the heavy tax levied against tobacco products.

Danna discussed the firm's new product, called Free, at a news conference Tuesday. He was accompanied by Dr. Donald Harrison, the chief of cardiology at Stanford University School of Medicine who is a consultant to International Brands.

Harrison said that nicotine-laced tobacco causes cardiovascular diseases that kill about 200,000 people in the U.S. a year.

"Ninety per cent of the smokers want to quit, but only 20 per cent do — about the same percentages as for heroin addiction," Harrison said.

The new cigarettes still have about three to four milligrams of tar, about the same as low-tar tobacco cigarettes, Harrison said. That means that they still pose a cancer hazard.

The no-nicotine cigarettes will be competitively priced with tobacco cigarettes, about 75 cents a package, Donna said.

Palestinian autonomy issue still at impasse

CAIRO (AP) — Egypt and Israel are stalemated over terms for autonomy for the Israeli occupied territories, but pushed ahead with efforts to expand direct relations by putting Egyptian newspapers on sale in Jerusalem and Israeli newspapers in Cairo.

Egypt on Wednesday rejected Israel's latest formula for home rule for the 1.1 million Palestinians on the West Bank and the Gaza Strip. Egypt said it would present a counter-proposal when Israel and Egyptian negotiators meet today in Cairo.

A foreign ministry spokesman said the Israeli plan was unacceptable because it limited the proposed Palestinian ruling council to administrative functions. He complained the plan was a "step backward" and a rehash of old plans already rejected by Egypt.

"Egypt holds that self-rule for the West Bank and Gaza must include legislative, administrative and judicial powers," the spokesman, Ambassador Ezzat Abdel Latif, told Egypt's official Middle East news agency.

An Israeli spokesman expressed "puzzlement" and "dismay" over the Egyptian rejection.

Israel and Egypt began negotiations on an autonomy plan shortly after they signed their peace treaty last March and are scheduled for conclusion in May. The slow-moving talks have arranged a number of minor agreements, but have failed to reach an accord on the key issue of how much power the Palestinian council will wield.

Newspaper vendors reported brisk sales in both Jerusalem and Cairo on Wednesday, the first day of the reciprocal sales. The exchange was another sign of improved relations on a personal level between the two former enemies.

Kennedy egged

United Press International

Demonstrators hurled eggs at Sen. Edward M. Kennedy in Newark, N.J., Wednesday night as he walked into a club for a campaign appearance, but the presidential candidate was not hit.

The volley of eggs splattered on three Secret Service agents. Police wrestled the demonstrators — two women and a man — to the ground and arrested them.

The agents formed a ring of security around Kennedy and hustled him into the Essex Club unharmed.

The demonstrators shouted that they were members of the Communist Workers Party and were protesting the slaying of party members in Greensboro, N.C.

Nkomo meets Soames

SALISBURY (UPI) — Guerrilla leader Joshua Nkomo met with British Governor Lord Soames Wednesday to voice grievances over the implementation of the cease-fire while co-leader Robert Mugabe's forces warned of more violence.

Nkomo asked Soames for more Commonwealth troops to monitor the truce and "reassured the governor that he wanted to fight for free and fair elections and put the past behind him," a source said.

Sources said Nkomo's attitude contrasted with that of the forces of Patriotic co-leader Mugabe, who were causing problems for the truce.

The British interim government has accused Mugabe's guerrillas of sending non-combatants into cease-fire camps while armed insurgents remained at large.

Now even Cadillacs recalled

DETROIT (AP) — Cadillac is recalling 18,900 cars in the U.S. and 1,300 in Canada to check on screws that might loosen and allow the car to roll free when parked, the GM Corp. division said today.

Screws attaching a shift control bracket might not have been fully tightened on the Seville or Eldorado models from early production for the 1980 model year, Cadillac said.

Cadillac said owners should firmly apply brakes when starting until their cars can be inspected and, when parking, should fully apply the parking brake in addition to putting the transmission in park. Dealers will tighten the screws if necessary, Cadillac said.

Spokesman Norb Bartos said less than a dozen reports from motorists alerted Cadillac.

Fire door an escape hatch

Five juveniles Wednesday took advantage of inadequate fire escape doors to flee the refurbished Victoria Youth Detention Centre.

Four of the escapers, two 15 and two 16, were picked up in downtown Victoria within two hours of the 7 p.m. breakout.

The fifth, a 15-year-old boy from Kelowna, remains at large.

YDC director Del Phillips said the youths broke out through a fire door at the north exit of the centre at 1125 Pembroke.

Workmen had changed the locking system on the door earlier that day, transferring a bolt from the outside to the inside.

Phillips said the changes were demanded by the fire marshal's office.

But he said the bolt placed on the inside can be fairly easily jimmied and the inmates didn't take long to figure it out.

Phillips said there has been a problem with the fire doors since the centre reopened in October. A week after it reopened five inmates went out one of the doors.

Following that escape staff positioned vehicles against the doors and then installed bolts on the outside.

But the fire marshal said that presented a serious fire risk and ordered the bolts removed.

Phillips said two months ago he advised the B.C. Building Corporation, which holds the lease on the muncipally-owned facility, that an entirely new locking system is needed.

The corporation and facilities managements branch of the attorney-general's ministry agree a new system is required but the matter has not been brought before the Treasury Board to obtain funds.

Meanwhile, Phillips said that despite the fire marshal's order, he'll put the bolts on the outside of the fire doors once again until the new locking system in installed.

School board eyes budget

Trustees will get their first look Tuesday at Greater Victoria School District's revised 1980 budget estimates based on a $55 million provisional document passed in November.

Debate is scheduled for next Thursday, and Jan. 29-31 if additional time to consider the spending requirements is needed.

At least one figure will be higher than what was estimated in November. The total bill for teacher salaries this year is $257,000 more than the $38 million set aside in the provisional budget.

At the time the provisional document was prepared a salary settlement was still being negotiated. It was resolved last month with a raise awarded by arbitration.

Teachers are getting a 9.28 per cent hike on the salary scale. But cost to the school district rises to 9.33 with the inclusion of allowances, substitute teacher salaries, administration salaries, extra health benefits and premium benefits.

Trustees also will be faced with a number of spending proposals which did not go before the board until after the provisional budget was passed.

Provisional estimates represented a 10.6-per-cent rise in total spending over 1979.

Courts get nod

Two new public tennis courts on the Esquimalt high school grounds on Colville Road have been approved by Greater Victoria school trustees.

The courts will go in provided school use is guaranteed.

The Esquimalt parks and recreation commission proposed the two additional floodlit courts adjoining two existing courts on the proerty.

The municipality would pay $45,000 in capital and maintenance costs, with assistance from its Neighborhood Improvement Program.

Trustees agreed to the addition at no cost to the school district, but objected to wording in the contract referring to "primarily for public use,".

Trustees specified that they want wording to recognize school use of the courts.

The courts will be fenced and have a special all-weather surface applied over an asphalt base.

Ignoring rules caused electrocution: inquest

A foreman electrician who was electrocuted at Victoria Airport Nov. 29 didn't follow safety procedures as prescribed in the maintenance manual, a coroner's jury was told Wednesday night.

Transport Canada regional safety officer Ronald Gomez said Maxine Alphonse Guilbault should have done "two or three things" before entering the airport's high voltage unit to replace two light bulbs.

The safety steps included shutting off the power to the airport, organizing a meeting before the work was done and wearing a hard hat instead of a baseball-type cloth cap he wore at the time.

Guilbault, an electrician at the airport for more than 20 years, touched a 2,400-volt fuse while inside the unit and was killed.

The jury ruled the death was accidental.

Two workmates William Albert Howie, 2009 Seamount Place, and Norman Turner, 2469 Tanner, testified Guilbault may not have been aware the fuse was live when he entered the unit.

The men said Guilbault told them he had tested three fuses and found they were dead.

After the mishap Howie ran to a nearby main junction box where the power could be turned off and Turner attempted to jam the high voltage unit with a control handle. But Guilbault had slumped free before either could be done.

The jury recommended the 2,400-volt single phase lighting transformer be relocated inside the high voltage cubicle where it could be seen so that an electrician could do a voltage test.

The jury also suggested that a warning sign be placed adjacent to the control handle on the outside of the unit noting it was not a disconnect switch.

Chamber offers aid

Directors of the Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce agreed Wednesday to approach the Capital Regional District with an offer to assume economic development functions for the region.

President Cedric Steele said directors favor the bid providing the CRD does not want the role.

Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier, chairman of the CRD's economic development committee, met with Steele today.

Provincial Secretary Evan Wolfe today continued to dodge questions about alleged unauthorized changes in the boundaries of Vancouver-Little Mountain constituency.

Wolfe called a press conference Wednesday to say reports that changes were mysteriously made in the Eckardt commission report on electoral boundaries before it was tabled in the legislature June 20, 1978 are totally without foundation.

Wolfe refused to answer a barrage of reporters' questions about alleged discrepencies between the legal discription of Little Mountain riding and the official map that accompanied the report.

He said such questions should be addressed to the man who wrote the report, Judge Larry Eckardt.

Today Wolfe was asked about the latest revelation, that the Royal Commision staff was working on the report after Eckardt officially signed it off and that there are overtime sheets signed by Eckardt to prove it.

Again, the minister said such questions should be directed to the judge.

Judge Eckardt is on vacation in Mexico and unavailable for comment.

In his press conference Wolfe released statements from the Queen's Printer and the government mapping branch to show that the final type script and maps were in their hands from the time the report was completed until a printed copy was tabled four days later.

Wolfe said this should put an end to allegations that any mysterious alterations were made in the Little Mountain boundary.

Little Mountain is represented in the Legislature by Wolfe and Human Resources Minister Grace McCarthy.

When planning this year's vegetable garden be sure to use succession sowings.

The term "succession sowings" appears frequenty in this column. It is limited to the home garden, meaning "little and often, according to the needs of the family."

The home gardener is not a farmer, nor are farming procedures suited to the home garden. We are not interested in tonnage or marketing dates, nor labor costs related to maximum production from a given area.

Most available bulletins are based on farming practices, even those on growing vegetables at home, and the authors of gardening books lean heavily on material from experimental stations and agricultural institutions.

Home gardening is not a money-making venture. The potential market is the gardener's immediate family. To serve this market efficiently requires a study of the tastes and eating habits of the members of that family, and careful estimates of maximum consumption over given periods of time.

Home gardening is also a spare-time hobby, not a full-time occupation. The hours available for this hobby must be considered when planning what to grow.

The profit from home gardening is pleasure and relaxation, plus the quality and flavor of the fruits and vegetables found in varieties not suited to commercial growing.

The minimum weekly requirements for a family of five will be somewhere around three lettuce, one cabbage, two pickings of peas, one bunch of green onions, one picking of beans and spinach, six beet roots, three summer turnips and a dozen carrots.

The difficult part of home gardening is having these small quantities readily available in prime condition over as long a period as possible without any going to waste or losing their quality or flavor.

On the southern end of Vancouver Island seed can be sown from late April until late August or early September. We take advantage of this extended growing season by sowing vegetable seeds at 10- to 15-day intervals instead of sowing the entire garden on one weekend. This is sucession sowing.

We use short rows not more than one or two metres long, and to save waste sow very thinly the crops normally thinned. For crops which will be transplanted only a pinch of seed is sown, the rest of the row left for the transplants. We continue this until the 15th of July using different varieties of each vegetable suited to the time of year.

On July 15 we make a complete new vegetable garden to supply the family's needs from mid-September until the end of October, using the same varieties as for the early sowings in spring,and we fill the vacant spaces with produce that can be gathered over winter.

So our term "succession sowing" can be further translated as sowing only a three-week supply every 15 days more or less, the actual time between sowings being extended by a week as the season progresses and germination and growth accelerates.

Each home gardener must determine a suitable schedule by trial and error. The soil itself, the location of the garden, its average micro-climate, and the requirements of the family concerned, are factors on which such a schedule must be based.

Discarding excess produce because of over production represents waste; waste of energy, time, food and soil nutrients. Shortages cause unnecessary expenditures of money for food the garden should supply.

CLUES DOWN

1. FUDDLED not muddled. The clue favors an answer in the sense of intoxicated rather than merely confused. (Consider the difference between having "a clear head" and having things clear in one's head.) "FUDDLED" bears this sense in a way that "muddled" does not.
2. LIVID not vivid. The clue's word "long" is a pointer to LIVID, since vividly colored marks tend fairly soon to tone down.
3. RULE not mule. A RULE is supposed to "work," or to have its designed effect. A mule might be in honorable retirement, or a sort of pet.
4. CARE not cars. CARE is the more credible answer. Cars increase anyway (as also do highways) with no general reduction of speed.
12. TANKERS not talkers. Glib types are termed "fast talkers" as a set usage: one doesn't have, in this sense, "comparatively fast talkers" (a more literal form of words better applicable to TANKERS).

CLUES ACROSS

4. CAPE not caps. The clue's thinking in terms of one material or another favors the singular answer CAPE, rather than caps.
6. FURIOUS not curious. Since the letter is insulting, the reaction is apt to be of anger rather than mere curiosity.
8. DRIVER not drives. In golf, drives are not related to one "player," as a DRIVER is. Also, drives constitute the covering of distance by players; they don't "give" the players any particular facility.
10. POP not top. The flashiness of their stage getup is related to the popular nature of their work, rather and to their being at the top, if they are so.
11. GET not set. Cutlery, etc., that is reserved for special occasions only, is normally kept stored somewhere, so the natural idea is that when the occasion arises, you GET it out.
13. FACE not race. Emphatically, he "certainly doesn't want" to lose FACE; but, as a sportsman, he may not mind losing a race which he stood little chance of winning anyway.
15. TEA not sea. The idea of a "mouthful of TEA" is quite reqasonable, but it would be sea water, rather than "sea" as such, that one might inadvertently get a mouthful of.
16. MEAT not heat. it is electricity, say, rather than heat as such, that comes into our homes.
17. TAKE not make. When (perhaps frequently) he is the butt of a joke, he has the chance to show his ability to TAKE a joke. He can make a joke at almost any time.
22. AREA not aria. An opera aria is rather the sort of thing one knows, or doesn't know: there is little reason why a man should know anything "about" any arias, as one generally tends to know about various AREAS from ordinary experience, study of geography, etc.
23. VARNISHED not tarnished or garnished. With care, things don't get tarnished at all (much less "badly" so). Aptly, VARNISH needs applying with "care" if a good job is to result, whereas garnish is more a matter of being tasteful.
24. SOLE not some. Being "deprived of property" rather implies that you own it properly (as by SOLE right) than that you merely have some right to it.

Mideast crisis hits drugs

By AB KENT

The political upheaval in Iran and Afghanistan is affecting illicit drug distribution in North America, an international observer said here Wednesday.

Dr. Donald Smith of Ottawa, last year's chairman of the United Nations Commission on Narcotic Drugs, said the breakdown in these two drug-producing nations is resulting in more mid-eastern drugs entering Canada and the U.S.

He said the quantity is rising also in Western Europe.

Smith, who headed the Canadian mission to the UN drug agency, is an observer this year and is touring the West speaking on international drug policies, what is being done by the UN to control the problem and to raise funds for drug abuse control.

He was in Victoria to speak to University of Victoria students and at a public meeting at the Nellie McClung branch library in Saanich.

Smith said in an interview government funds for the UN work are drying up with austerity, making it necessary to seek private support.

He said the UN is undertaking pilot projects in the drug-producing areas of the Far East, like the remote hill villages of Thailand where there have been successful treatment and social programs in about a dozen villages.

Farmers raise opium poppies as their source of income.

Among the older population, the use of opium is accepted in lieu of medical treatment for common illnesses which go untreated due to isolation and the absence of medical aid.

As a result, Smith said, about 10 per cent of the population in these villages is addicted.

UN personnel offer treatment for the illnesses common in the hill country, educate the people and try to show the farmers how to raise other cash and family food crops.

"If they can grow poppies, they're pretty good farmers and could grow other crops like coffee, beans or rice," he suggested.

So far the pilot projects have been effective in remote villages that would normally be yisited only by opium buyers.

"But there are a thousand villages where nothing is being done," Smith said.

One agency which hopes to extend the work is the Addiction Research Foundation of Ontario, which is seeking a Canadian International Development Agency grant to provide primary health care and drug abuse treatment.

A few UN programs which were in progress in the Badakhshan-U.S.S.R. border region of Afghanistan have had to be abandoned due to the Russian invasion.

But Smith said that since Russia is represented on the drug commission, a resumption of the work might not be far off or difficult.

In his speeches, Smith said he tries to explain the cost of heroin, marijuana, cocaine and illegal tranquilizers in terms of the cost of trafficking, police work and health costs.

On a world scale the illicit trade in narcotics is probably on the same scale as the global pharmaceutical industry — "tens of billions of dollars."

One of the worst aspects of drug abuse is the way it spreads, Smith said.

In Bangkok with a population of about three million, there are about 100,000 addicts who have risen above the traditional use of opium.

In many of the producing areas opium is being chemically processed to yield heroin and users are shooting it into themselves with needles, a habit acquired from the West.

GIS forms should be sent early

Pensioners getting the Guaranteed Income Supplement from the federal government should get their applications in as soon as possible for the 1980 supplement, even though the deadline is March 15.

If everyone waits for the deadline, officials fear they'll be snowed under.

Kits, consisting of application forms, instruction booklets and return envelopes, were sent to 131,913 B.C. pensioners earlier this month.

Heath and Welfare Canada officials advise reading the booklet carefully before filling out the form.

All January OAS cheques include a folder announcing increased benefits and showing the higher allowable income.

Relatives and friends of seniors are asked to help pensioners with the GIS applications if necessary.

The forms are doubly important now that the provincial Guaranteed Available Income for Need (GAIN) for senior citizens depends on the amount of federal supplement received.

PLANNING WORKSHOP for HIGHLAND LAND DISTRICT AT Belmont-Fisher High School Lunch Room

January 26, 1980
9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.

THE PLANNING PROCESS

As a result of the controversy over the use of land in the Highlands, the Planning Department was instructed by the Capital Regional Board to prepare a secondary plan for the area. It was anticipated that land use problems related to the maintenance and the development of the Highlands would be sorted out and identified through the plan making process. Ultimately, the plan would provide guidelines for the management of the area in terms of environmental protection, land development, regional park designations traffic circulation and services.

To ensure that the views of the residents are fairly represented in the plan, the Planning Department has organized a series of public participation programmes including: establishment of the steering committee for Highlands planning, public workshop and public meetings.

THE STEERING COMMITTEE

A steering committee for Highlands planning was organized in August 1979 by the Planning Department. The Committee consisted of the representatives from the East Highland community Association and the Highland District Community Association. The committee completed its service by clarifying planning issues in order to assist the participants at the January public workshop. These issues will be circulated at the workshop.

PUBLIC WORKSHOP

As indicated, a public workshop has been organized for the planning of the Highlands on January 26th. The participants at the workshop will be requested to discuss and to define planning issues for the area in terms of environment, development, parks and recreation, circulation and services.

PLAN ALTERNATIVES

Once the planning issues are clarified, it will be possible for the Planning Department to outline plan alternatives for the area. Sometime in February 1980, the public will again be invited to review the plan alternatives before the secondary plan is drafted.

The Capital Regional District Planning Department may be contacted for further information at 524 Yates Street, Victoria, B.C. TELEPHONE: 388-4421

Ald. Larry Mann said today he has uncovered "some very questionable facets" to a $25,000 contract for a park sprinkler system that Esquimalt council awarded to a Burnaby firm Monday night.

Mann and Ald. Colin Blair both opposed awarding the contract at Esquimalt council Monday but were outvoted after council was told by parks and recreation manager Jack Boutilier it was necessary for council to award the contract to beat a deadline for government-funded Neighborhood Improvement Projects.

The sprinkler system is for Bullen Park and is the last project on the municipality's $500,000 NIP list.

Boutilier also told council it was necessary to award the contract to the Burnaby firm to ensure uniformity in the municipality's sprinkler systems.

But Mann and Blair said subsequent investigation revealed that no local firms were asked to quote on the sprinkler system, although there are qualified companies in Greater Victoria.

Both aldermen objected to the hurried awarding of the contract on the grounds that the action violates two council policies — that any contract for goods or services exceeding $3,000 must be out to tender and that local firms must be given every opportunity to do work when their bids are comparable.

Mann says he learned that a "Mr. Hamilton" was consulted by Boutilier to design the Bullen Park system, and Boutilier later reported that the only acceptable equipment was that manufactured by Toro.

Mann said he's upset that Boutilier didn't tell council that Hamilton is an employee of Taylor, Pearson and Carson, the western Canadian distributors of Toro irrigation equipment.

Mann and Blair both pointed out after the Esquimalt council meeting that there are local firms which could have done the job.

The Times contacted Owen Hamilton in Burnaby this morning.

A sprinkler systems designer, Hamilton said it had been understood from the outset that there was a tight deadline to meet if Esquimalt expected to get any federal and provincial funding for the project.

Hamilton referred to Boutilier's extensive experience in park development.

He said the sprinkler system's special head, which is buried beneath the turf, is desirable on fields where soccer or other games are played as it doesn't cause injuries.

The reason for recommending the Burnaby firm of Pro Turf to handle the imnstallation was again simply a matter of time, Hamilton claimed.

"I took a contractor I know is bondable," Hamilton said. "I'm simply sending over someone I can trust."

New labor head holds PhD

Victoria Labor Council delegates Wednesday night elected a 32-year-old computer programmer with a doctorate in nuclear physics as their new president.

Peter James, who works for the B.C. Systems Corp. and is a member of the B.C. Government Employees Union, defeated Dick Belfit of the Telecommunications Workers Union by a vote of 47 to 35.

The new council head replaces another BCGEU member, John Shields, who chose not to run again after serving two one-year terms.

In the only other battle for the top executive positions, Jack Groves of the International Woodworkers of America was elected secretary-treasurer, defeating BCGEU delegate Donna Mottershead by a 52-to-30 margin.

Groves replaces Larry Ryan, stepping down after serving 13 years in the council's only full-time position. Ryan has taken a job as organizer for the Service Employees International Union.

Groves, who served as council president for seven years beginning in 1967, said he will seek a leave of absence from his job as maintenance mechanic at the Plumper Bay booming grounds of B.C. Forest Products.

John Schibli, secretary of the Vancouver Island Building and Construction Trades Council, was elected first vice-president and Belfit, second vice-president, both by acclamation.

The new president said in an interview his main goal will be to expand the council's membership and work toward organizing non-union workers in Greater Victoria. He mentioned bank workers specifically.

James obtained his PhD in nuclear physics from the University of Victoria and then went to work for nearly two years for Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd. in Chalk River, Ont.

He returned to Victoria about four years ago, served a stint with the highways ministry and shifted to the B.C. Systems Corp. in 1978.

Ryan was given a standing ovation at the meeting after Shields praised him for his work in the labor movement and within the Greater Victoria community.

"Larry has represented the trade union movement as a spokesman in this community and he has been recognized with distinction," Shields said.

Concern over Thomson takeover

Delegates to the Victoria Labor Council voiced concern Wednesday night about the trend of ownership concentration of Canadian newspapers.

The council passed a motion calling on the Canadian Labor Congress to push for federal legislation bringing a halt to such a trend.

The action was in response to last week's takeover of F.P Publications by Thomson Newspapers Ltd.

As a result of the takeover, Thomson, which already owned 119 small-circulation U.S. and Canadian papers, will now operate eight more Canadian dailies including the Times and Daily Colonist.

In a resolution that was passed unanimously, the labor council executive said it was concerned about the takeover "because it poses a new threat to press freedom in Canada.

"An independent and critical press is needed at a time when power at all levels is becoming more and more centralized and when those who exercise it claim they always exercise it benevolently," the resolution said.

Council secretary Larry Ryan said he is concerned because of the mediocre standards of journalism in Thomson papers in Canada.

He termed the takeover a very negative development in Canadian journalism.

Roger Stonebanks of the Newspaper Guild said the council's action was too late.

At any rate, he added, although negative statements can be made about Thomson, FP doesn't rate much higher.

"FP has shown itself to be a rotten bastard employer in many places, including this town."

In other business, the council also decided to urge the federal government and other provincial governments to escalate programs similar to B.C.'s new low-cost mortgages.

Roger Lewis of the International Woodworkers of America said the Canadian Labor Congress should pressure the various governments because the program's beneficial effects are obvious.

He said he is very reluctant to praise B.C.'s Socred government, but there is no doubt the mortgage plan will take people off the welfare and jobless rolls.

Globe-trotting course offered

A course to help world travellers get off the beaten track starts next week at the YM-WYCA.

Beyond the Tourist Route is a six-week course co-sponsored by the Y, Victoria International Development Educational Association and Canadian Crossroads International.

"It's for people who want to extend their travel and learning experience," said Lee Ann Johnson, one of the organizers.

She said travellers often experience cultural shock when they leave their accustomed environment for some nation on the other side of the globe.

The cross-cultural experience is offered to assist their adjustment to conditions outside the confines of tourist hotels and resorts usually frequented by the travelling masses.

The first session will be devoted to an introduction and some generalized guidance. Subsequent Monday nights will cover the Caribbean, Mexico, Northern Canada, Southern Africa (not just South Africa), and India.

Students may take the introductory lecture and one other for $6, or the whole course for $15. Registration will be limited to 20 persons.

For further information and reservations, call 386-7511.

Municipal officials are checking all options to save energy dollars in Oak Bay community services.

The $25,000 oil bill at Oak Bay Recreation Centre is a prime target. But other likely areas for conserving energy include garbage pickup, smaller police cars, and eliminating electric sewage pumps where possible.

Administrator Jim Craven said the staff at the rec centre is examining all aspects of heat consumption. Use of a heat exchanger is being considered to capture energy wasted in the freezing plant, which might be better used to heat water for the swimming pool.

Some saving has already been gained with the use of the city's central transfer point for garbage, eliminating a 20-mile round trip to the dump by Oak Bay vehicles.

Smaller garbage trucks, smaller general duty pickups and the use of diesel engines are among further options.

Oak Bay will be represented at a seminar Monday sponsored by the ministry of municipal affairs and Sierra Club at 1 p.m. in the boardroom at the Provincial Museum.

The city of Seattle will make a presentation outlining the conservation measures it has adopted to make it a leader in this field in North America.

30 days to end boozy interruption

A Victoria liquor delivery firm has been given a 30-day extension of its business licence to eliminate a broadcasting complaint.

Party Bottle, operated from 960 Brighton Crescent, dispatches orders by two-way radio, disturbing neighbor Mildred Anne Gracie of 979 Brighton, whose stereo receiver picks up the messages accidentally.

Owner Robert Webb was told by the Victoria licensing department he has until 11 p.m. Feb. 8 to arrive at a solution agreeable to Mrs. Gracie, or his business licence will not be renewed.

Efforts to correct the situation in consultation with the department of communications so far have been ineffective.

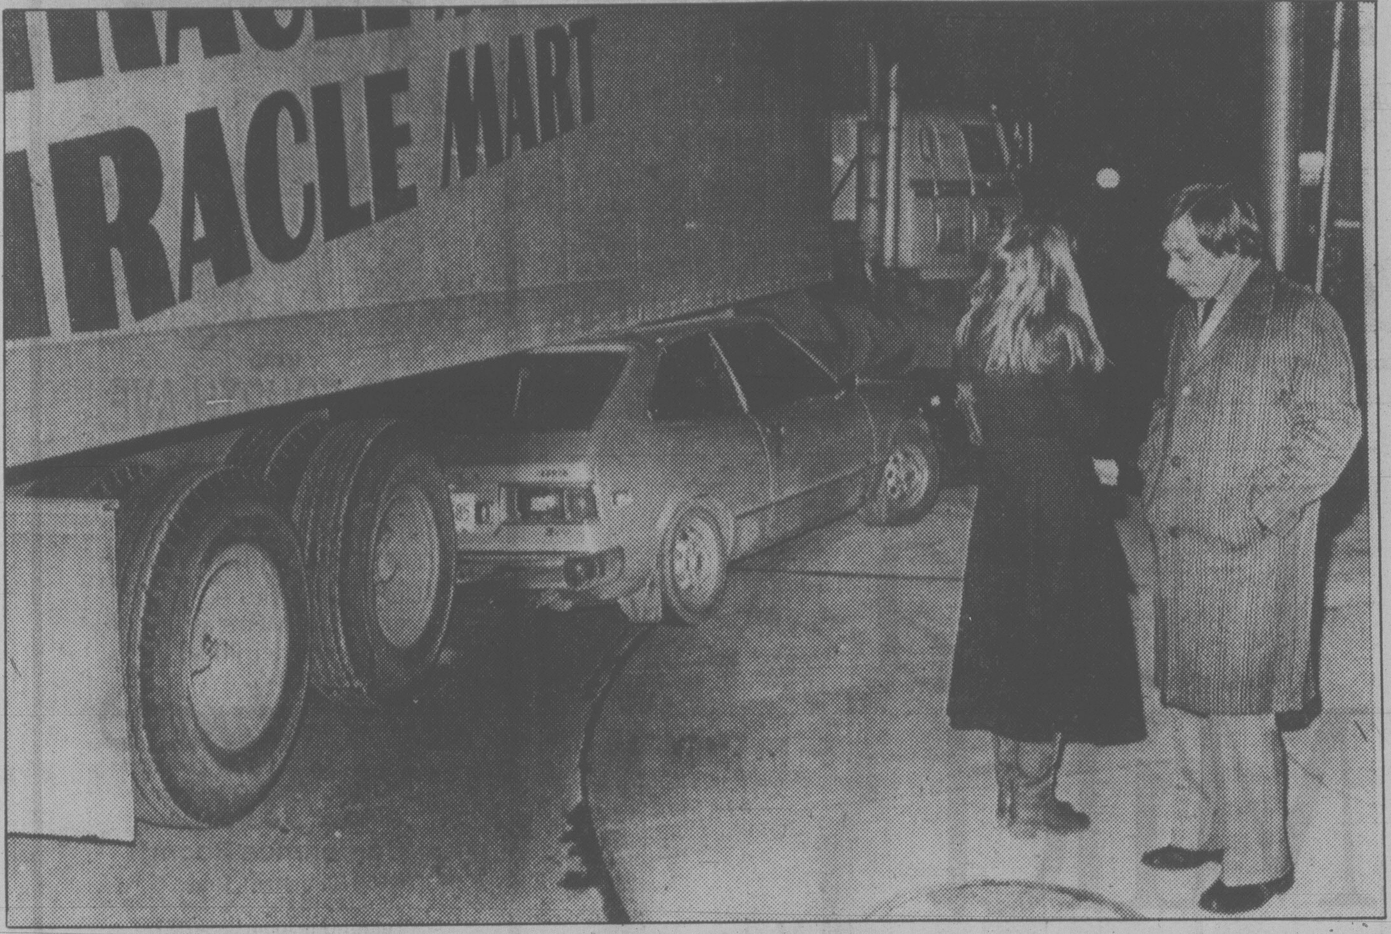
Accord on hospital funding



SEMI-DETACHED, a motorist looks on in seeming disbelief after a transport truck drove over his small car in Ottawa Wednesday. Both vehicles were apparently turning the corner when the mishap occurred. No one was injured.

B.C. agrees to reverse current budget method

VANCOUVER (CP) — After years of wrangling over health costs, the provincial government and British Columbia hospitals have come out in support of a report on hospital funding.

Released Wednesday, the $225,000 study recommends a reversal of the present budget method. Instead of final funding decisions taking place after the services have been delivered, they would be made beforehand with the details spelled out in a formal contract between each hospital and the government.

The consultants who prepared the report say the changes will reduce antagonism between hospitals and the health ministry, provide positive incentives for hospitals to cut costs and reduce the uncertainty for hospital and ministry planners.

The study was set up in 1978 as a joint project of the B.C. Health Association, the major spokesman for the province's hospitals, and the ministry.

While the study was in progress former health minister Bob McClelland followed a year of unevenly-applied fiscal restraint with a five-per-cent ceiling on increases in 1979-80 hospital budgets.

Hospitals responded by curtailing programs and letting the public know through the press about outdated facilities. Eventually, McClelland increased funding by $82 million.

Annu[illegible] hospitals this year will be about $700 million out of a total health budget of $1.2 billion. Budget requests are prepared at the beginning of the year, but not approved until expenditures are under way, and substantial year-end adjustments are often required.

The report says deficiencies in the present system include:

Hospitals do not know when the ministry will complete a phase of the funding cycle or how the budgets are determined.

There is little recognition of fixed and variable costs.

Differences in the sophistication of services rendered by different hospitals are not always recognized.

Hospitals may overestimate costs and will spend their entire budget whether necessary or not.

Planning and budgeting are carried on separately and there is not enough monitoring of hospital efficiency.

To overcome the problems, the study report recommends that the province develop an over-all health plan and specify what each hospital should be doing. The five-year plan would serve as a budgeting framework.

Individual hospital contracts would spell out fixed costs and the methods of determining variable costs such as the amount of x-ray film used, or the number of complete blood counts.

Hospitals that come in under budget would be allowed to keep a "reasonable portion" of the underrun, the report says.

Gold at $801 . . . 'It's nuts'

NEW YORK (AP) — Gold prices soared past $800 a troy ounce for the first time today as buyers paid up to $803 U.S. — $932.60 Canadian — on the New York Commodity Exchange. The new mark came just two days after the metal first passed $700.

"It's absolutely nuts," said a trader at Republic National Bank in New York after gold hit $803 before slipping to $801.

The surge came after prices had fallen in early trading as many traders took profits. The New York price had dropped as low as $715, down from $744 Wednesday before the latest surge began.

In London, gold closed at $760, a record close for that market — up from $752.50 Wednesday. It had fallen to $730.50 in mid-morning trading.

Hospitals split on abortions

Victoria's two major hospitals are now taking distinctly different approaches to abortions.

Victoria General has stopped abortions and its board is planning to meet with its therapeutic abortion committee to discuss committee policy.

In past, virtually all abortion applications would have been approved.

But so far this year, only four of 31 applications for abortions have been approved by the committee.

The Royal Jubilee Hospital abortion committee has begun meeting weekly to consider applications and its approach has been to approve all applications.

In the past, each hospital board has approved the members of the other hospital's abortion committee.

In this way, the comittees met on alternate months, with the VGH committee handling all the applications for both hospitals one month and the RJH committee handling the load the next month.

Vic General handled most of the region's abortions, doing 725 abortions last year compared to 1,362 live births.

At RJH, there were 550 abortions compared to 1,434 live births in the year ending March 30, 1979.

However a change in the membership of the Vic General abortion committee brought about, in the words of committee chairman Dr. Jack Cooper, "a trend to consider applications a lot more intently."

But when the VGH committee recently approved only two of 15 applications, the RJH committee held a special meeting and approved all those which had been rejected.

VGH medical director Dr. John Carlow said the changed stance of the abortion committee reflects a changing mood among the hospital's medical staff, which is concerned about the number of abortions being done at the hospital.

Cooper said the committee is simply following the Criminal Code, under which abortions are allowed if the mother's health is endangered, as well as the United Nations definition that health is not only an absence of disease, but a positive state of well-being.

"The majority of members have decided that usually there is not adequate evidence in the applications of the health risks involved. They are looking for evidence of real health hazards, information which is to be supplied by the doctors of the applicants."

Meanwhile, Yvette Perreault, spokesman for the Coalition of B.C. Rape Crisis Centres said Wednesday that Health Minister Rafe Mair should be replaced with a minister who is not biased against abortion and who will uphold federal laws allowing abortion.

Kabul kicks out newsmen

Times News Services

Afghanistan's pro-Soviet government today ordered the expulsion of all American journalists, accusing them of biased reporting and interference in Afghan internal affairs, a Western diplomat said in New Delhi.

"The U.S. correspondents were detained by Afghan authorities at the Kabul Intercontinental Hotel and told this morning to leave on the first available flight," said the source, who declined to be identified.

The U.S. Embassy in the Indian capital said the American Embassy in Kabul was informed of the expulsion order. Initial reports said only American citizens were to be deported, the source said. It was not clear if this included non-Americans working for U.S. organizations.

The Afghan order came three days after Ayatollah Khomeini's regime in neighboring Iran ordered all American journalists out of that country.

Diplomats in New Delhi estimated 50 to 60 Americans are in the Afghan capital. Much of their news reports and film have been hand-carried to other countries since communications have not worked normally since the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan on Christmas Day.

U.S. State Department spokesman Mark Sawoski said the expulsion order was "a flagrant violation of basic norms of international behavior. We find it reprehensible."

Cabinet may order BCR back

Speculation is mounting that the government may force a return to work as marathon negotiations aimed at settling the month-old B.C. Railway strike continued today.

The two sides have bargained at the legislature for more than 24 hours with no sign of a break.

Labor Minister Jack Heinrich has consistently opposed the use of essential services legislation to end the strike although the government is under heavy pressure from northern communities.

Heinrich said the BCR situation was discussed in cabinet early today but said he was not taking any special message from cabinet back to the negotiators.

While cabinet may be considering a back-to-work order, it faces the strong possibility that the unions will not obey.

Carter opts for Tier plan

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — U.S. President Carter has decided he prefers the proposed 2,400-kilometre Northern Tier pipeline to carry Alaska crude oil to northern states, according to the Minneapolis Star.

The newspaper says the decision is based on advance word received from the office of Vice-President Walter Mondale. In Washington, the White House said an announcement would be made later today.

Carter chose the Northern Tier proposal over a competing plan by Trans Mountain Pipe Line Ltd., which wants to build a 823-mile line from near Vancouver to Edmonton, where it would connect with a line that now supplies the northern states with Canadian crude oil.

The Northern Tier line would run from Port Angeles, Wash., to Clearbrook, Minn.

The president's decision is expected to provide a major boost to Northern Tier Pipeline Co.'s efforts to obtain financing for the $1.23-billion (U.S.) project.

He said Carter's decision was based largely on four factors:

—The system can move oil to refineries in northern states from a larger number of sources.

—It can deliver more crude because it has the greatest capacity of the various proposals.

—Its location, entirely in the U.S., will provide more job opportunities for U.S. workers and more tax base for state and local governments.

—An all U.S. route is better for national security reasons and will not face the delays of obtaining Canadian permits.

Civic beat

Starting today on the Times local page, reporter Norman Gidney takes his first look at what's happening in the Greater Victoria area in a new column called Civic Affairs.

Every Thursday, he'll offer comment and analysis and review what local politicians are doing, thinking and the decisions they make which affect our area.

Gidney knows the civic scene.

A former Canadian Press and legislative reporter, he joined the Times as an editorial writer and now covers the city hall beat in Victoria.

Coroners unpaid since November

Fee-for-service coroners haven't been paid since early November because the provincial government seriously under-budgeted the coroner's service in the current fiscal year.

B.C.'s chief coroner Dr. William McCarthur confirmed the delays in payments and revealed that some funeral homes and hospitals in the province have refused to conduct business for the coroner's office until they get paid.

However, McCarthur said none of the 140 fee-for-service coroners in the province have refused to hold inquests because of the pay delays, despite press reports to the contrary.

McCarthur said he told the government last June that the $1.05 million budget for the coroner's service for 1979-80 was inadequate and that between $500,000 to $1 million more would be needed.

He said that a review of past coroner's budgets indicated that the average expenditure — in 1979 dollars — was $1.5 million.

However, McCarthur said, nothing apparently was done and the money simply ran out in November.

He said he understands a special warrant for $750,000 has now been drawn up and approved by cabinet.

McCarthur said cheques are being processed today and all the coroners should receive their back payments by next week.

On another matter, McCarthur said there is no truth to reports that coroners were resigning to protest compulsory attendance at a three-day training seminar in Vancouver the end of the month.

He said he hasn't received any resignations but added "I can't say I'm not going to get one."

On Wednesday Chilliwack coroner Dr. Doug Colledge said he had resigned in December rather than attend the three-day session because it would cost him about $1,500 in lost revenue as a general practitioner.

Colledge said he wrote to McArthur's office saying it would not be economically feasible for him to attend the seminar. McCarthur wrote back and asked for his resignation.

McCarthur said that when he took over as chief coroner last March the largest single complaint he heard was the lack of training for coroners.

He said that under the Coroner's Act he has the authority to conduct seminars and programs for coroners and was using that right in organizing the up-coming seminar, the first ever.

"The opposition is understandable," he said. "People have been operating totally independently for years and years. They are resistant to any sort of central organization."

Former fireman Fred Kelley says he feels like the Tin Man from the Wizard of Oz as he heads out to California to await a heart transplant. Kelley, 39, whose diseased heart apparently is growing steadily worse, left his Framingham, Mass. home with his son for a cross-country drive to Stanford University Medical Centre. Last October, doctors there rejected his bid for a heart transplant, claiming his heart wasn't diseased enough at 25 per cent of capacity. "They won't perform a transplant until my condition reaches about 15 per cent capacity," Kelley said, "and since the doctors at Massachusetts General Hospital expect it to decrease, they thought I should be in California." He said he had a CB radio installed in his van in case he becomes ill on the trip and needs help. "My handle is the Tin Man," he said, "and I'm looking for a heart."

Wallace has been confined to a wheelchair since 1972 as a result of an assassination attempt during his campaign for the U.S. presidency.

Robert Young, television's Marcus Welby, has cited the implantation of intraocular lenses in his own eyes as evidence the devices can help some cataract patients. But the 72-year-old actor, whose lenses were implanted three years ago, refrained from making sweeping recommendations to a U.S. Food and Drug Administration committee in Washington reviewing the safety and effectiveness of the devices. He said it would be presumptuous to do so. Young said he was aware of all the problems associated with the lenses but they have made such a difference that the risks for him were worth it.

Dear Abby:
My husband (I'll call him Joe) and I live in the same house but have separate bedrooms because I've known for years that Joe can't leave other women alone. I got tired of fighting with him about it, so I just gave up. In fact, I don't even care anymore.

I'm staying with him until our daughter grows up. Barbara is 11, and Joe is a very good provider.

A few weeks ago Joe went to Colorado to visit his brother, Frank, and he took Barbara along. When they came home Barbara told me that after Uncle Frank went to work, Daddy and Aunt Jennie would lock themselves in the bedroom for a long time. She said Daddy told her not to tell anyone.

Abby, should I let this go or make a stink? After all, Jennie isn't just another woman. She's his brother's wife!

Names Changed

Dear Changed:
What's to be gained by making a stink? Your husband would probably turn on Barbara for turning him in.

Since your daughter is being exposed to some raunchy behavior on the part of married folks, be sure she understands that not all married men behave like Daddy, nor do all married women carry on like Aunt Jennie.

Dear Abby:
My old lady and I are having an argument and hope you can settle it.

I say pigeons are still being trained to carry messages, and the wife says that pigeons haven't carried anything but diseases since the Civil War.

Who is right?

Andy

Dear Andy:
You are. Pigeons are still being trained to carry messages.

Dear Abby:
What is a mother supposed to say when her child asks, "Can Kevin stay for supper?" — and Kevin is standing right there looking up into your face?

I always say, "Of course, but Kevin has to call his mother and get her permission first."

Then my brat says, "Mother, you call Kevin's mother. He's afraid to."

So, like a ninny, I call Kevin's mother, and she says, "Are you sure he'll be no trouble?" Then what am I supposed to say? Anyway, I think you have the picture.

Conned

Dear Conned:
Your resentment at being outsmarted by a couple of junior con artists is understandable, but you're lucky your son has friends. Simply instruct him to ask you privately if he may have a guest for supper.

Clinic soothes skin and souls

By LON WOOD

The mirrored chamber resembles a science fiction time machine — or futuristic prop from Star Wars.

There are clicks, buzzes, a whirring fan — and lots of flashing light. But the person inside doesn't go anywhere — except, perhaps, away from the discomfort and emotional hurt of a hereditary skin disorder that has dogged humanity since the dawn of mankind.

Psoriasis. In ancient times a term applied indiscriminately to many skin diseases — some serious and transmissable. The afflicted were ostracized; forced to have ringers of warning bells walk ahead of them, and to wander homelessly as beggars.

Like lepers, their very appearance was considered unclean. Leprosy and psoriasis were not clearly differentiated.

On top of their troubles, some of the outcasts suffered terrible itching — which may explain why the disease was called psoriasis; derived from the Greek psora, meaning itch.

Today the term labels a specific skin disease which is not contagious and is very common. In Canada and the U.S. nearly eight million people have it.

Both psoriatics and the non-afflicted can now be assured that psoriasis, with modern treatment, can often be brought under control, despite there being no known cure.

The chamber plays a big part in psoriasis control and is tucked away in the Victoria General Hospital Annex at the corner of Quadra and Fairfield streets.

The entire upper floor of the annex is home of the VGH Psoriasis Day Care Clinic — one of only two such clinics in B.C. and part of a slim network of clinics strung across the nation.

The clinic is co-ordinated by Phyllis Patterson, a registered nurse assisted by another RN, Shirley Griffiths, on an eight-hour daily basis, Monday through Friday under the direction of dermatologist Dr. H.J. Lewis. Its inception and continued service is rooted in the caring co-operation of medical professionals, VGH auxiliary and psoriatics themselves.

"The light unit came about July 17, 1978," Patterson said in an interview Wednesday. "It started out just as a nucleus for a clinic which we patterned to a degree after the Shaughnessy Hospital clinic in Vancouver.

"To date, we've had 167 patients aged 15 through 75. Each person comes three to five weeks, depending on the severity of their psoriasis and their rate of response. A few have stayed up to 10 weeks — and for everyone, that's eight hours a day."

After referral by a skin specialist, or general practitioner for a person in a remote area of Vancouver Island, there is a waiting list of three to five weeks before a person enters the clinic as an outpatient to begin the all-day applications of steroid creams, petroleum distillate tars, anthralin paste, shampoos, cleansers and special bath oils all interspersed with calculated exposures to artificial sunlight (ultraviolet).

Baths and ointments remove the whitish, adherent scales of psoriasis from their reddened base, and promote healing. The ultraviolet light treatment retards growth of psoriatic skin, which is four to five times as thick as normal epidermis because of accelerated reproduction of epidermal cells. It normally takes about 28 days for a cell to travel from the bottom of the epidermis to the top, but the process takes only three or four days in psoriatic epidermis — hence the buildup of scales.

Booking time at the clinic, however, isn't quite as simple as making a dental appointment.

People who hold down jobs during the clinic's eight-to-four day are out of luck if they cannot take time out for treatment. Those coming from around the Island are faced with living costs averaging $1,000 per treatment if they lack friends or family to board with while in Victoria.

"Unless they have a medical plan or vacation leave — it is not easy," says Patterson. "We've had people who start out but can't keep up the schedule. Retired people have an advantage with not working, though for some the money can be a hardship.

"Cost of treatment is $5 per day which is not covered by provincial medical plans since psoriasis is not considered to be disabling. Mind you, we know it is a disabling disease — particularly when people have it on hands and feet."

Actual cost per day of treatment is upwards of $30 per person, borne by the hospital auxiliary, currently led by Peggy Murray.

Tuesday this week the auxiliary handed over $15,000 for clinic operation, bringing to $50,000 the total raised and donated in less than two years.

"It's all done through bazaars, lottery tickets, selling flowers in the hospital lobby, a goody cart that goes around to the patients — it's awfully hard in nickles and dimes, but we have a hardworking group. One woman is coming up 90 this March," says Murray.

"This started as our baby," she said. "A desperate situation existed in the lack of treatment available for psoriasis patients in Greater Victoria and on the Island — but it was not really known at the time how great was the need and how many psoriasis sufferers there are."

Both Murray and Patterson said unless demand grows for the government to take it over, the clinic could fold.

Latest estimates show $140,000 will be needed to continue operation of the clinic until the hospital moves to its new Helmcken Road site in March, 1982. The auxiliary estimates it can provide a further $20,000 by that time — making a total of $70,000.

"The shortfall of $70,000 must be obtained from interested service clubs or government agencies," said Murray.

Dr. Lewis estimates there are seven to ten thousand psoriatics on Vancouver Island and that "if we could get them all together, with their friends and relatives, we'd have some 60,000 people who could help us."

But of these psoriatics, said Patterson, only about two per cent seek treatment at present, "mostly because elbows and knees can be covered up, and because a lot of people just can't afford those practical considerations though they suffer in every other respect."

Lewis, Murray and Patterson all agree the clinic's support problems are compounded even if only slightly by the attitude some Island doctors.

"They don't even tell their patients!" exclaims an outraged Murray. "And we're the only one on the Island!"

Both Lewis and Patterson agree there is an attitude of "We can do it better" in the minds of some.

But if clinic workers display little concern for grudging professional recognition of their physical successes, it is because they are swept away by the social value the clinic has established.

"As far as I'm concerned its the most important aspect," says Patterson. "Physically they get treatment, but emotionally they get equally as much.

Patterson

"Down here we start with some pamphlets: What you have to bring, the outline of the day, three other short, to-the-point pamphlets on psoriasis.

"At the moment we have no psychologist, but Dr. Lewis and I go over the patients; talk about what progress is made, what changes should be made in their ointments. On the third week of treatment he comes in and gives a talk to each. We try to do a lot of counselling."

Lewis starts the first five minutes of each individual session much the same. Then the talk varies.

"Often I have to smash some of their peculiar ideas about the disease they have," he said during an interview in his clinic office. "A lot of people have been told nothing can be done, while 95 per cent are responding to control at our clinic. . .

"I'm merely here as a catalyst — the patients get together and help themselves. Some have come here introverted and left as extroverts."

The lapse rate of the condition is as individual as the response that clears it up, said Lewis, who added that until more is known about the mysteries of psoriasis, there are countless projects to work on such as education of spouses and the public, working towards a 24-hour clinic and clinic facilities for children; facilities for out-of-towners to stay — "not to mention research."

Persistent noise is constant misery

By DR. L. L. COLEMAN

I've had noises in my head for 15 years. You once wrote about a machine that can alleviate this noise. I lost that column.

Mrs. H.H.

Dear Mrs. H.:

Only those who have suffered from head noises, or "tinnitus," can appreciate the misery of this persistent and insistent, bothersome condition. Noises in the head may sound like whistling sirens, like the roar of the ocean, like buzzing, or like the escape of steam from a radiator.

Sometimes the noise is continuous. Other forms of tinnitus are interrupted and consistent with the beat of the heart or pulse.

The major complaint is that the noise is constantly present, especially when one is in a quiet room. Many people will say that "the noise wakes me up at night." In reality, it is the quiet of night that exaggerates the noise in the head.

Tinnitus has many causes. Occasional blockage of the ear after a flight, or infection of the ear may produce it. These conditions are usually temporary and the tinnitus disappears when the problem does. Tinnitus has also been attributed to some drugs. Large quantities of aspirin, and quinnine, are two major offenders. Allergies rarely produce long-term tinnitus.

By far, the most common causes of tinnitus are vascular ones. Narrowing of the blood vessels by arteriosclerosis and high blood pressure are frequent offenders. There are other causes, too. Many complicated tests have been devised in an effort to pinpoint inner ear disturbances and neurological problems that may be responsible for tinnitus.

Members of the "tinnitus club" will say that the noise is lessened in the inside of their skulls when they listen to music, hear the radio or are in a noisy place. This effect is known as "masking." Because of this finding, a number of masking instruments have been manufactured. Those who manufacture and sell them, unfortunately, are far more enthusiastic than the majority of people who have bought them. I cannot possibly understand why a tiny noisemaker should cost from $300 to $500. I suggest that anyone who decides to buy one arrange with the dealer to use it on a trial basis for a month. If it works, fine. Then, perhaps, the unconscionable cost may be justified. If it doesn't work, return it.

The American Tinnitus Foundation, Post Office Box 5, in Portland, Ore., is a scientific organization manned by prestigious ear doctors, neurologists and psychologists. They have a vast amount of interesting and informative booklets that can help those who are tortured by tinnitus.

"One day you'll realize that the people capable of running the country are too smart to get into politics."

ANGER: It's all legit

By JAMES YENCKEL
The Washington Post

A young man brought up in a strongly religious family had been admonished by his parents never to display anger. Nor, they told him, should he express any negative feelings about them. To do so would go against their church's teachings.

Their objective may have been to raise a properly mannered child who honors his mother and father, and they did so, but along the way they laid the groundwork for personal problems that were to plague him in adult life.

As a child he had quickly learned that to speak out at home about something that angered him brought catastrophe down on his head. By the time he grew up, it's not surprising he had become fearful of asserting himself.

This disability — and it definitely is one — paralyzed his career, and despite a good education, he was able to work only at menial tasks.

This young man, who eventually sought help from a local mental health centre, is part of a large percentage of North Americans whose lives are complicated because they're afraid to let someone know they're mad at them — whether it's the spouse, the children, the parents, the boss or the plumber.

"Probably 50 per cent of the people I see come into therapy because of a difficulty in expressing anger," says Bob Maxwell, therapist at the Springfield Outpatient Unit of the Mount Vernon Centre for Community Health in Fairfax County, Va. Maxwell and fellow therapist Toni Ann Sciullo recently led a discussion on What Can I Do When I Get Mad? as a part of the centre's continuing series of educational lectures.

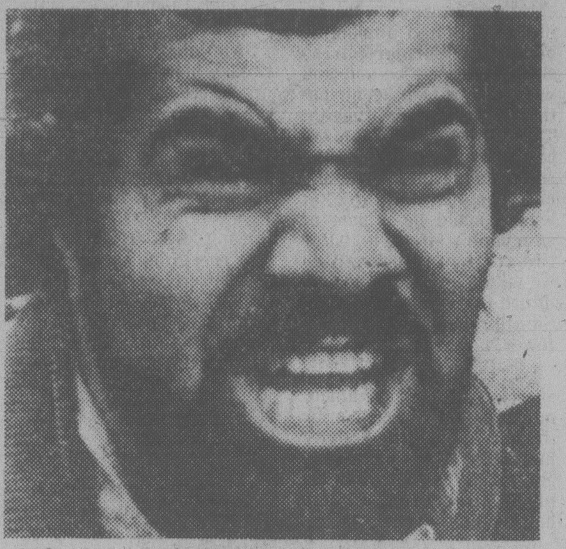
Anger is a human emotion that one should not be afraid of expressing, Maxwell and Sciullo tell their clients — not, of course, in the sudden, sometimes violent explosion that comes from a long-time bottled-up rage but in appropriate methods that also can be learned.

"If a child is forbidden to show his feelings — bad as well as good — its going to effect his concept of self and his ability to relate to others," says Maxwell.

The numbers of these people, he says, "are legion. They lead productive lives, but not as rich and joyous lives as possible."

Often, he says, people adopt a "nice guy" pose to avoid speaking up. "There's no such thing as a perpetually nice guy. Given the normal problems we all experience, in the best of relationships there are bound to be irritating, upsetting occasions."

In a marriage, the relationship suffers if these irritations are not aired, he says. "If I taught people how to love, I would teach them first how to be angry. No genuine relationship exists that doesn't include irritation at one another."



Nice guys are hiding it

When he and his wife were first married, Maxwell says, people considered them the "ideal couple." But "we were just scared to death to be angry" at one another. When they began learning to bring their anger into the open they grew "a heck of a lot closer."

People who keep their anger inside often are afraid that speaking out may harm their marriage, sour a friendship or cost them their job. "There is a risk," acknowledges Maxwell, "I don't deny that. There is a risk everytime we express ourselves honestly."

But failure to communicate — in a marriage, for example — can lead to "a slow deterioration of the relationship" in which the spontaneity is gone. The couple, he says, may go from simple toleration to unproductive arguing to divorce. That's not to say all arguing is bad. To the contrary, says Maxwell, "a couple that quarrels is apt to be healthy — presuming they're quarreling in a nondestructive way."

Another aspect of the problem is that people often don't recognize their anger. Sciullo cites the case of a husband who came home from the office to complain about the one task his wife had failed to complete that day, ignoring all those she had managed to finish.

Instead of getting justifiably angry at her spouse, says Sciullo, the wife felt guilty, blaming herself for what she perceived to be an inadequacy. Not until one recognizes one's anger, she says, does one have the choice of doing something effective about it.

How should one express anger? Certainly not by "ranting and raving. That rarely solves anything," says Maxwell.

At their recent lecture that drew 20 people, young and old, Maxwell and Sciullo advocated the use of direct "I" statements. If, for example, a friend is nervously kicking your chair and it bothers you, don't say: "Bill, will you knock it off." That puts Bill on the defensive, says Maxwell.

Instead, turn the focus on yourself and say calmly: "Bill, I find it irritating." In that situation, says Sciullo, "You take responsibility for your own feelings." Also you probably will be effective and the kicking will stop.

For practice, "before biting off a major conflict with a spouse," says Maxwell, their clienta are urged to chance "a non-threatening confrontation" with a grocer or a neighbor — "someone with whom he has a minor problem."

"Expression of anger does not mean loss of control," says Maxwell, "but a lot os us picked up that message when we were younger."

Maxwell and Sciullo offer a final suggestion. Though it's most effective to verbalize your anger, sometimes the situation doesn't permit if and you might be better off "punching your pillow," jogging or washing the kitchen floor until a more appropriate time for speaking up.

Ray of hope for infertile

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A technique using a laser beam instead of a knife to open blocked Fallopian tubes may offer hope to infertile women who want to have babies, doctors told an international gynecological group here.

"It's still experimental, but it shows tremendous promise," said Dr. Joseph Bellina, head of the Laser Research Institute in New Orleans. He was one of several doctors who presented papers on the procedure to the International Congress of Gynecological Laser Surgery.

Bellina, speaking prior to the formal presentation, said he had used the technique 15 times and that doctors from France and West Germany had used it experimentally on about 50 others.

Although there have been too few operations for conclusive evidence, he said about 80 per cent had "positive biological tests" — they had babies.

"They're getting pregnant and carrying to term — and that's an end point you can't question," he said.

The Fallopian tubes, which carry eggs from the ovaries into the womb, conventionally are unblocked through microsurgery, using small needles and sutures thinner than human hair. Two studies done in 1978 found microsurgery had a 60-per-cent success rate.

One reason lasers work so well is that even the finest scalpel leaves behind more damaged cells than does a laser.

dr. elizabeth bright-see and jane hope

Most people go on diets to lose weight. But others are on special diet regimes because of a medical problem such as kidney or gall bladder disorders, hypertension, high blood pressure or diabetes. More and more North Americans are on controlled diets because of our No. 1 killer, heart disease. These people on strict regimes are either at risk of having a heart attack or have actually had one. They've been told to start watching what they eat — and to start exercising!

Combining sensible eating with sensible exercise as a winning combination isn't a new idea. But the concept has been taken a giant step further by Nathan Pritikin, founder and director of the Longevity Centre in Santa Barbara, California. His program has created quite a flurry of interest among health professionals and the media.

We know that heart disease is a killer. We know the value of exercise for heart attack victims. We also know how important it is for those at risk to cut down on high-fat foods, to increase consumption of whole grains, to reduce alcohol consumption and so on. But Pritikin has those who attend his clinic (or read his books) on a diet that makes these fairly strict guidelines, as outlined in Canada's Report by the Committee on Diet and Cardiovascular Disease, look like a Roman orgy!

His regime is basically quite simple. There are eight high fibre, high-carbohydrate, low-fat, low-protein, low-cholesterol meals served daily coupled with four or five strenuous walks. He has his clients (most of whom have suffered a heart attack or at the very least are potential victims) follow this regime daily.

There's no alcohol allowed (on the maintenance program about an ounce of wine a day is allowed). Soda water with lime is one beverage and ghastly tasting Linden tea the other. No regular tea or coffee. Also, smoking is frowned upon!

His diet adds up to about 600 calories a day. That low energy intake combined with the strenuous walks for energy output ensures that, as a side effect, most people lose weight, usually about a half-pound a day. But the majority of people go because they believe, like Pritikin, that this diet-exercise program could possibly add years to their lives.

There are numerous "sucess stories" since the clinic opened in 1976. However, the Pritikin program comes under attack by some health professionals. We'll go into the pros and cons of his program next week.
